Dr. Harris' Testimony Is Attacked by Defense Expert

CENTRAL FIGURES DURING DRAMATIC MOMENTS IN TRIAL OF LEO M. FRANK

HOOPER, OF THE PROSECUTION, ARGUING FOR THE RETENTION OF THE CONLEY TESTIMONY

DR. HARRIS, ON THE STAND, TELLS ABOUT HIS EXPERIMENTS WITH CABBAGE

STATE FINISHES TESTIMONY AND DR. LEROY CHILDS BEGINS EXPERT EVIDENCE FOR DEFENSE

Dr. Childs Characterizes Conclusions Similar to Those Made by Dr. H. F. Harris and Dr. J. W. Hurt as Remarkable Guesses—He Says Cabbage Is Most Indigestible of All Vegetables and Might Stay in Stomach for Many Hours

DEFENSE IS EXPECTED TO PUT UP CHARACTER WITNESSES IN VIEW OF JUDGE ROAN'S RULING

Dalton Swears He Has Visited Pencil Factory in Company With Women, That Frank Knew of His Presence and That Jim Conley, the Negro Sweeper, Was There—He Tells of Frank's Visitors

When recess was ordered at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday in the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of little Mary Phagan, Dr. Leroy Childs, called by the defense as its first witness, was on the stand. Dr. Childs had already testified in answer to a hypothetical question framed by Attorney Reuben R. Arnold, that a post mortem examination nine days after death would not show whether a blow on the head, such as that described by Attorney Arnold, had produced unconsciousness, or whether it had been delivered before or after death. Dr. Childs declared that such a blow as that described by Mr. Arnold might even have produced death. He characterized any statement to the effect that such a blow procured unconsciousness and that it could not have produced death, as nothing short of a remarkable guess.

Dr. Harris also declared that cabbage was the most indigestible of all vegetables and that it might remain in the stomach as long as four hours and a half. Looking at the cabbage taken from the stomach of Mary Phagan and submitted as evidence at the Frank trial, Dr. Childs said that it was impossible to tell how long this food had remained in the stomach.

Dr. Childs followed Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the state board of health, who was the concluding witness for the state. At the close of Dr. Harris' cross-examination, the state rested. Answering the questions of Attorney Arnold, Dr. Harris reaffirmed the testimony given by him previously; namely, that Mary Phagan was killed within less than an hour after eating the cabbage and bread found in her stomach. He drawn from Dr. Childs the vigorously dispute the evidence of Dr. Harris fixing the time of the little girl's death. Other medical experts, no doubt, will follow Dr. Childs.

It is now believed that the defense will put Frank's character in evidence, as the state has already succeeded in making an attack upon it through the testimony of Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, and C. B. Dalton. Should the defense put up witnesses to prove Frank's good character, the state will be permitted to rebut this testimony with any evidence it may have that is detrimental to Frank's character.

C. B. Dalton was the first witnesscalled by the state Thursday morning. Attorney Reuben R. Arnold objected to each and every question and each and every answer of Dalton's testimony on the ground that it would be irrevelant, prejudicial and unjust. The objection was entered before Dalton began to testify and was overruled by Judge Roan. Dalton swore that he had visited the National Pencil factory with Daisy Hopkins, that Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, was always present and that Frank had received women visitors in his office. Dalton gave no specific dates. He was cross-questioned by Attorney Rosser.

When Thursday's session started Deputy Sheriff Plennie Minor, in charge of the court room, and his several assistants announced that every spectator who disturbed the court by applauding any decision or any action in the case, would be promptly ejected. The deputies are determined to prevent a reoccurrence of the scene of Wednesday, when Judge Roan announced his important ruling on the testimony of Conley.

If there is any more applause it is probable that the court room will be cleared.

COURT CONVENES.

A number of medical students stood in line at the court house door for a couple of hours, Thursday morning, and were among those early arrivals who gained admittance to the court when the doors were opened. They were there, some of them explained, to hear the further testimony of Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the state board of health, whose evidence is vital to the state's charge insofar as it tends to prove that because of the undigested cabbage in Mary Phagan's stomach the little girl was killed within thirty to forty minutes after she ate her last meal at home.

In other respects, the prelude of the court's convening was as usual. Leo M. Frank, the accused, arrived early, and breakfasted in an ante-room of the court. Mrs. Frank, his wife, arrived later and joined him in the ante-room. About half of the crowd that wanted to get in, found room. The remainder was stopped at the doors.

The main witness Dr. H. B. Dalton was called as the first witness. Before he arrived in court, Attorney Arnold arose to object to each and every question directed to the witness, and every answer made by him, on the ground that his testimony would be irrelevant, immaterial and prejudicial.

DALTON TESTIFIES.

"I overrule your objection," said Judge Roan. "Go ahead, Mr. Dorsey."

Dalton was sworn.

"Do you know Leo M. Frank?"

"Yes."

"Do you know Daisy Hopkins?"

"Yes."

"Do you know Jim Conley?"

"Yes."

"Do you work at the National Pencil factory?"

"No."

"Have you ever been there?"

"Yes, four or five times with Daisy Hopkins."

"Did you go to the office?"

"Yes."

"Was Frank there?"

"Yes."

"Then did you go to the basement?"

"Yes."

"Where in the basement?" The daigram was handed to the witness. Dalton pointed to the inclosure behind the partition alongside the boiler.

"Did Frank know you were there?"

"He knew I was in the building. I don't know about the basement."

"Was Jim Conley there?"

"Yes."

"Who was with Frank?"

"Why, sometimes two and sometimes"

Aeroplane Drops, Killing Soldier of Fortune and His Companion

Picturesque F. S. Cody, English Aviator, Dies in Smash-up at Aldershot

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Colonel F. S. Cody, the famous Anglo-American aviator, was killed in an aeroplane accident at Aldershot today.

Cody was trying out a new aeroplane when he met his death. In the machine with him was a passenger named Evans who also was killed. They were flying over the open country in the Aldershot district and had reached the government house when their aeroplane began traveling badly and finally, with a crash, fell to the ground. Several officials hurried up and found the bodies of Cody and Evans beneath the aeroplane.

Cody was the most interesting figure in aviation in the British Isles. He was a real soldier of fortune with a varied career behind him. He was well known to the public in England and very popular. He wore a sombrero, a long moustache, an imperial an' long hair, looking strikingly like "Buffalo Bill."

He came to England a number of ...rs ago from the United States, where he had been a cowboy. He had a severe struggle to obtain a start in England. After living precariously for a while he attracted the attention of experts in the British war office on account of his display of natural gifts of construction, particularly in aerial machines. He was said to be able to build anything in the way of a flying machine or balloon.

His first experiments were made with box kites. These he developed on the British military training grounds at Aldershot, where 20,000 of the finest troops in the British army always are kept in readiness to march off at a moment's notice on any expedition. He achieved such success with his kites that the British war office attached him to its aviation staff.

His theatrical appearance and methods created some prejudice against him, which, however, was largely dispelled when he foreswore American allegiance and became a British subject. The public in England only began to take him seriously when he carried the military prize of $2,000 open to the world at Salisbury Plain in August, 1912.

Following that triumph, he built several machines and was constantly experimenting with improvements. All of his aeroplanes were heavy biplanes which his rivals considered crude in their construction but he nevertheless made successful flights with some of them.

Evans was a member of the Indian civil service who had obtained leave of absence to come to England to study aviation.

The aeroplane was flying at an altitude of between 200 and 300 feet when it fell. Members of the Royal Flying corps removed the bodies to the military mortuary and an inquest is to be held tomorrow.

Cody leaves a widow and son in England.

The machine used by Cody was a new hydro-aeroplane which he was tuning up for the forthcoming race around England and Scotland for a prize of $15,000. The machine weighed over a ton. The secretary of state for war in telegraphing his condolences to Mrs. Cody today, said:

"The service of aeronautics owes much to his mechanical genius and outrageous perseverance."

Gas for Fuel

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7.—For the purpose of reducing the operating expenses, the management of the United States mint in this city will use gas as a fuel instead of oil as heretofore.

M'NAUGHTON PARDON IS SOUGHT BY ATTORNEYS

Doctor Would Take Arsenic to Aid in Freeing Another Convicted of Murder

Making the startling assertion that Dr. W. J. Bell, of Atlanta, was willing to stand before the prison commission and take into his veins an injection of two grains of arsenic in order to prove that such an amount is not sufficient to cause death, Attorney F. H. Saffold, of Swainsboro, Thursday morning made one of the strongest points in pleading for a pardon for Dr. W. J. McNaughton, who, nearly three years ago, was convicted in Swainsboro of murdering Fred Flanders by arsenic poisoning.

The prison commission did not interrupt Attorney Saffold's argument to question Dr. Bell in the matter.

The attorney made a strong plea for Dr. McNaughton, basing his claim for leniency on the plea that his client had not been given full benefit of reasonable doubt as to the possibility of Flanders having met his death through some other means.

The recent nolle prossing of the case against Mrs. Mattie Flanders, who was indicted as an accomplice in the murder, was used as additional argument in favor of Dr. McNaughton, his attorneys affirming that if Dr. McNaughton had been tried and convicted, Mrs. Flanders should also have been tried.

In reading the motion to nolle prosse the case against Mrs. Flanders, Attorney Saffold stated that "it was the most remarkable motion of its kind that had ever been presented in the annals of the criminal court," and that the order to nolle prosse was the most remarkable order of its kind in that it was taken, not on the motion of the solicitor general, but on the motion of the "attorneys for the Flanders family."

Attorney Saffold read the motion, which stated that by nolle prossing the case "the state does not concede the innocence of Mrs. Flanders," and that "circumstances pointed strongly to her guilt," but that under the circumstances it was deemed best not to bring the matter before a jury at the time, though the order to nolle prosse, of course, did not preclude the reopening of the case should further evidence be found.

Attorney Saffold declared his belief in Mrs. Flanders' innocence, but stated that Dr. McNaughton had not received fair play; that he was a stranger in a strange county and had been tried immediately after the death of Flanders when sentiment in the community ran dangerously high; and that Mrs. Flanders was closely allied by blood to the most influential families of Emanuel county, which, said the attorney, suggests itself as a reason why the case against her has been allowed to drop.

A. R. Bradley, of Swainsboro; Dr. J. M. McNaughton, of Augusta, brother of the condemned man; Solicitor Lee Moore, of Swainsboro, and several others interested in the case are in the city for the hearing.

"This is the second time the case has been before the prison commission. When it was under consideration last year the commission decided to commute Dr. McNaughton's sentence until the outcome of the trial of Mrs. Flanders was known.

Dr. McNaughton's respite will expire September 7, and every effort is being made to secure a pardon in the meanwhile.

STARTLING CHARGES HURLED BY SENATOR AT DEPT. OF JUSTICE

Borah Declares Special Agents Have Investigated Judges to Influence Decisions in Which Government Was Interested

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The flat charge that department of justice agents had investigated federal judges to influence their action in cases in which the government was interested was made in the senate today by Senator Borah, and indorsed, partially at least, by Senator Norris.

Senator Borah's charge was brought out by a report from Attorney General McReynolds, responding to a senate resolution asking whether federal agents were investigating judges.

STARTED BY SPEER.

The resolution reflected some sentiment aroused in the case of Federal Judge Emory Speer, of Georgia, whose court had been investigated and who had attacked the department of justice in a public speech.

The attorney general's reply to the inquiry was that any report that the federal department of justice was maintaining a system of espionage over judges "was entirely without foundation."

SENATOR BORAH'S CHARGE.

Senator Borah responded with his charge.

"I know this is a very serious charge," he said, "but I am so reliably informed that I make the statement that within the last four or five years special agents have carried on such investigations with a view to influencing judges."

Senator Norris declared he did not have all the information Senator Borah had, but that he believed his statements were based on fact.

M'REYNOLDS' REPORT.

The attorney general's report declared that only three judges had been investigated ,one of those being Judge Robert W. Archbold.

Senator Works, who introduced the resolution, denounced the attorney general's report today as "evasive," and announced he would make a further demand for information.

Senator Borah's charge was characterized as "startling" by Senators Crawford and Sutherland. The latter declared it "needed investigation," and that if such "sinister influences" continued, the "end of the republic was in sight."

HOKE SMITH TAKES HAND.

Senator Hoke Smith asked Senator Borah for the exact time when federal agents had been making these efforts to influence judges in behalf of government cases.

"I think it has been going on more or less continually for the last four or five years," said Senator Borah.

"These judges are practically under the control of the department as far as promotion and demotion is concerned," he continued. "They have been made to know what the government desires in cases and even what kind of a decision the government desires handed down. If

CROP MOVING PLAN OF M'ADOO PLEASES SOUTHERN BANKERS

Distribution of $50,000,000 Among Banks of South to Move Crops Discussed at Meeting

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The plan of the administration to distribute from $20,000,000 to $50,000,000 among the banks of the south and west, to facilitate the movement of crops, was discussed in all its phases at a conference this morning before officials and 100 leading southern bankers.

When luncheon recess was taken at 1 o'clock the bankers, among them, Robert F. Maddox, of Atlanta, expressed deep gratification at the attitude of the administration as conveyed to the bankers by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Assistant Secretary John Skelton Williams.

Other Georgia bankers attending the conference are:

Eugene Stetson, L. P. Hillyer, C. F. Lewis, F. L. Mallory and Henry Jones, of Macon; William Davant and Sigo Myers, of Savannah; A. S. Hatch, William Schweingert and Paul Mustin, of Augusta.

After luncheon the bankers, at the invitation of Secretary McAdoo, went in a body to the White House where they were cordially received by President Wilson. The conference was resumed at 3 o'clock today and by invitation Senator Owen and Chairman Glass, in charge of the administration currency legislation, will discuss the details of the pending bill for the benefit of the southern bankers.

The feature of the morning session was Secretary McAdoo's speech to the bankers. Mr. McAdoo was received with enthusiasm and his remarks met with hearty approval as was evidenced by the applause.

Secretary McAdoo told the bankers that the country is now face to face with the well-worn, annual bogey about a money stringency to move the crops of the south and west. He declared that fear and not fact was the basis of this annual condition and that the Wilson administration feels that it should use all of the resources it legitimately can to dissipate these fears and conduce to the business welfare and material prosperity of the nation.

He stated that the treasury department had worked out a plan to relieve the situation. He gave it as his opinion that the plan in its general aspect is entirely feasible, and that by hearty co-operation between the treasury department and the —banks the last vestige of the "annual bogey" will be wiped out. He urged that the bankers attending the conference to "speak out in meeting" and assured them that their views would be carefully considered by the department in making its allotment.

TO HELP COUNTRY BANKS.

Secretary McAdoo impressed upon the bankers that the department, in depositing these funds in city banks, would expect these institutions to take care of their country correspondents on a fair and reasonable basis so that the benefits

SPEECH BY BACON PREVENTS SENATE ACTION ON MEXICO

He Declares Crisis Gravest That Has Faced Nation in His Career and Defends the President's Course

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Further demand for passage of his resolution for investigation of Mexican conditions by the foreign relations committee was made today by Senator Clark, of Wyoming. Chairman Bacon asked that the resolution be referred to his committee before being acted on, but Senator Clark objected.

"The administration probably has a policy, but we don't know what it is," said Mr. Clark. "Now the president has sent his third confidential representative to the republic, but we are left without information, while American lives are being lost and American property destroyed. I see no reason for delaying action. There can be an investigation by the committee as well as by the administration."

OPPOSED BY BACON.

Senator Bacon said that conditions in Mexico and relations between the two countries are such that no hasty action should be taken by the senate.

"Because of the importance of this subject there is no higher duty resting upon us than to approach it with the utmost gravity and consideration," he declared.

Senator Bacon declared that notwithstanding reports from Mexico City giving the Huerta government's formal announcement that it would not receive John Lind unless he came with proper credentials and prepared to recognize the Huerta government, the senate should not act until there was some actual development.

BACON'S SPEECH.

"There has been no communication received by the Mexican government from the United States," said Senator Bacon. "Not until the message has been delivered and the Mexican government has had a chance to act upon it we should not undertake to deal with the situation. It is entirely possible that when Mr.

TEMPERANCE BILL TO BE PASSED ON NEXT YEAR

House Also Passes Resolution Providing for Filling Vavancies in U. S. Senate

The attempt to have the temperance committee make an immediate report on the Sarrcy-Hixon bill was ruled out of order by the chair as it was not in the order of the day.

Representative Kidd, of Baker, who has been contending for the report, was the author of the resolution. He demanded that a report be made to the house Friday by the temperance committee.

FOR SENATOR'S ELECTION.

A resolution under which the people shall elect United States senators was passed unanimously in the house Thursday. It was introduced by Representative Hardeman, of Jefferson, and is in accordance with the federal law passed several years ago providing for the election of senators by popular vote.

If this resolution becomes a law it will be possible for a United States senator to be elected to fill a vacancy caused by death before the legislature convenes. The other condition has prevailed heretofore in Georgia and at times Georgia has had only one representative in the national senate.

KILL TAX INCREASES.

The bill introduced by Representative Fullbright, of Burke, to add an additional mill to the ad valorem tax in 1915 for the school fund and an additional half mill in 1916 was lost by a 99-to-79 vote. The bill not only failed to obtain a constitutional majority but fell short of a house majority.

BORROWING AUTHORIZED.

The resolution intrpduced two weeks ago by Representative Slater, of Bryan, authorizing the governor to borrow upwards of $500,000 to meet any deficiency in the treasury due to slow tax returns, was passed unanimously in the house about noon Thursday.

Provided this resolution passes the senate and receives the governor's signature, the school teachers of the state will immediately receive part of their pay, which is now sadly in arrears.

Under a recent decision of the attorney general of Georgia such a law would be in accordance with the constitution, his opinion being based on a recent amendment to the constitution. The resolution provides that the bill become effective upon becoming a law.

INHERITANCE TAX PASSES.

The inheritance tax bill, introduced by Representatives Swift, of Muscogee, Ledbetter, of Polk, Cole, of Bartow and Slater, of Bryan, passed the house Thursday at noon by a vote of 105 to 13. It provides for a tax on bequests of $5,000 or over; when the bequest is to a member of the family the tax is 1 per cent, when not to a member of the family the tax is 5 per cent.

If this bill is made a law its advocates expect it hardly possible to estimate the addition in taxes it will bring to the state treasury. In New York a lik elaw brought the state $5,000,000 in revenue last year; in Utah an inheritance tax law brought enough money to the state out of the E. H. Harriman estate to build a new state capitol.

Failing by seventeen votes to attain a constitutional majority the bill introduced by Speaker Burwell, of Hancock, providing that one-half (2 1-2 mills) of the ad valorem tax be added to the general school fund, was defeated in the house Wednesday afternoon, the vote being 106 to 67, falling 17 short of the required 123 votes. This bill was known as the "administration bill" became introduced at the request of Governor Slaton.

The bill of Mr. Ellis, of Tift, to remove the Georgia experiment station from Griffin to south Georgia was passed upon favorably by the house committee Wednesday, but the senate committee reported unfavorably on the bill at their meeting Thursday.

The committees from the house and senate met jointly Wednesday and listened to Dr. A. C. True, of the agricultural department at Washington, to discuss the matter. Dr. True believed a new management should be named and the station be moved to Athens. Others also spoke regarding its removal. Commissioner Price advocated that the station stay at Griffin. He was backed up in this by Representative Fullbright.

Blood Poison or "606"

I have been giving the "606" and 914 for the treatment of Specific Blood Poison for the past two years and have given something near eight hundred treatments. I have proven, in connection with other leading Specialists, that "606" is THE remedy for Specific Blood Poison. Numbers and numbers of patients have been permanently cured by this wonderful remedy and the blood tests has shown that these cures are permanent and I have numbers of other patients on the road to recovery through the use of this treatment. I was the first physician in Atlanta to begin advertising and using the "606" treatment. I use the intravenous method and consider it the best. There is no need now for a patient to go through long weeks and months of waiting when results can be obtained immediately by the use of this scientific treatment. If you need treatment don't hesitate to come in and talk the matter over with me or if you can't call, write for my booklet, "The True Story of Salvarsan," or "606."

GEORGIA AND HER POLITICS

House Was Relieved When Filibuster Came to an End

A sigh of relief went up from the house Wednesday morning when the Wahlwender-Myrick-Shuptrine filibuster against the Kidd resolution came to a natural death shortly after convenement.

Important legislation of vital interest to the state was being held up and for a time it looked as though it might be effectually blocked for days, and even until the end of the session.

When the house came to order Mr. Wahlwender was in his seat armed with messages from two presidents of the United States and a pitcher of ice water stood on his desk. As the saying goes, he was loaded for bear. Both Mr. Myrick and Mr. Shuptrine had introduced bills about 100 pages long which they intended to have read in their entirety for the purpose of killing time and to save breath for the gentleman from Muscogee.

But it was decreed that the time members should get down to real work. Mr. Stewart, of Coffee, arising to a point of order, called the chair's attention to a part of the resolution that specified the report of the temperance committee on the Hixon-Searcy bill be made that morning at the time when all standing committees reported. It had not been done, he pointed out, and therefore asked that the resolution be ruled out of order because the house could not comply with its demands.

The point was sustained by Speaker Burwell and the house allowed to once more get down to work.

Say, Senator, What Was That Old Joke, Anyway?

It was 12:50 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and the senate had but ten minutes before adjournment. Senator McNeil took the floor, determined to hold it until the senate stood automatically adjourned, so that an afternoon session would be held.

"I don't know whether or not I have a ten-minute speech chocked up in me or not," he began. "But I'll try to think of something to say so as to entertain this body until the hour of adjournment. It reminds me of a joke in my college days. There—"

The senator was interrupted, asked to yield the floor, but he wouldn't do it. He was afraid to, he declared. He didn't want a motion of adjournment until morning to be put. He was interrupted again.

"Gentlemen," he pleaded, "this cuts me to the quick, to the very heart. I want to tell this joke. It was in my college days. There—"

"Mr. President," shouted the senator from the Twelfth. "What have his college days got to do with this question?"

"Mr. Harrell never saw a college," indignantly shouted Senator McNeil. "So how does he know? This joke now. There—"

Senator DuBose broke in with "Will the senator have a rickey or a Haig and Haig."

"I will be very pleased to see the gentleman after adjournment," replied McNeil. "But in the meantime there was that joke about my college days. There—"

"The senate stands adjourned until this afternoon," cut in the speaker at that moment, as the hands of the clock joined at 1.

And now the senate is dying to hear that joke.

It was noticed, however, that Senators DuBose and McNeil strolled off together.

Fight for Experiment Station Has Not Yet Begun in Earnest.

While it is true that the house and senate agricultural committees in joint session have awarded the Georgia Experiment Station to the south Georgia county which has the most attractive proposition to offer, it cannot be taken to mean that the fight is over by any means. As a matter of fact, the big battle has just begun with the ultimate result very, very much in doubt.

The first active step to move the station from its present location near Griffin came from the Wilkes delegation. Representatives Green and Booker, who introduced a bill to make the farm an integral part of the State Agricultural college at Athens. Then came the south Georgia measure, sponsored by Representative Ellis, of Tift, and signed by a score or more of the members of the house. At the same time Representative Connor, of Spalding, silver to the interests of the constituents, asked the appropriations committee for $5,000 with which to replace certain buildings at the station that had been destroyed by fire.

While it is true that the preliminary skirmish for the station and incidentally that federal appropriation of $30,000 has been won by the south Georgia cohorts, giving them considerable edge over all other competitors, it is equally true that a hard fight against the removal will be waged on the floor of the house, with the possibility of the Athens claimants fighting along in the general melee.

Whatever the outcome, the debate will be lively enough for the most exacting in point of real excitement so it would necessarily follow that more than usual interest is centered in the ultimate result.

He Hails From the Home of Ty Cobb, Some Distinction.

Representative T. G. Dorough, of Franklin, who after five weeks of silence in the house broke into the limelight with a ringing speech last week in favor of tax reform, is from Royston, Ga., the birthplace of Tyrus Raymond Cobb, and is accordingly very proud of the fact that he and the greatest of all ball players are citizens of the same town.

Mr. Dorough is frank to admit that there is some distinction to live in the place Ty put on the map when he began his pounding of the horse hide all over the lot, setting the pace for the older heads who had been indulging in the great national pastime before the Georgia Peach knew a baseball from a stone.

The Senator Seemed to Have Had "Lovely" Time.

A tall young man with curly hair walked into the senate chamber Wednesday morning, to be greeted by a hearty slap on the shoulder form one of the senators.

"Ouch!" he yelled, jumping three steps backward. "Don't do that. I'm sunburned."

One of the senators on the other side of the house leaned forward and asked a fellow-member who the young man was.

"Why, that's Senator Elkins," he was informed.

"Well, I declare," said the other senator, "I didn't know him, his face is so pink or rather, brick-red. Wonder what he's been up to."

What he had been "up to" was a trip to the Isle of Palms, where he spent several days during the first part of the week dipping in the green briny.

Commission to Investigate State Judicial Department.

The resolution of Senator M. D. Irwin, of the Thirty-fourth, providing for an investigation of the state judicial department with a view to revision, has been passed by the state senate.

The senator thinks that beneficial changes can be made if the commission will look well into the present system of Georgia law and report back to the legislature next session.

The commission has not yet been appointed. Its members will serve without compensation, volunteering to rthe job.

President Anderson's Wife And Children Attend Session.

During the senate session Wednesday morning, Senator B. S. Miller, of the Twenty-fourth, took the floor to offer a privilege resolution.

"Whereas, It has come to the notice of this body," he read, "that the wife, the daughter and the little son of its president are now in the senate gallery, be it resolved that they be extended the privilege of the senate floor during the rest o fthe session."

The senators looked up, and there, sure enough, were Mrs. Anderson and her two children. Senator John T. Allen seconded the Miller resolution with a motion that a committee be appointed to escort the visitors downstairs, whereupon the president appointed Senators Miller and Allen on such a committe.

During the rest of the morning the president's family were interested spectators from their seats near the senate platform.

IN LOCAL THEATERS

(Criticisms of initial performances at the local theaters are written by members of The Journal staff. All other matter appearing in this column is furnished by the theater managements.)

FORSYTH—Vaudeville.
GRAND—Motion Pictures.
BIJOU—Tabloid Musical Comedy.

Seven splendid variety acts, with the Keith brand, are receiving hands at every performance at the cool Forsyth this week. There is a little bit of everything, embracing the latest song hits, a new sort of comedy, novelty, music and some fascinating dancing.

The announcement that Ralph Herz, the well known musical comedy star, will head the bill for next week is an interesting bit of welcome news. William Weston and company, a talented musical act, are also booked to appear.

Starting with this afternoon "Balaoo," the demon baboon, will be the feature attraction at the Grand. This three reel picture is a thriller, and full of sensations. In addition there will be the very best of first run pictures, which are changed daily. "Balaoo" will be the offering for the balance of the week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, two matinee performances in the afternoon, starting at 2:30 and concluding at 5:15, and two exhibitions every night, starting at 8:30 and running until 10:15.

"Along the Pike" is proving a strong drawing card for patrons of the Bijou. Few musical comedies that have been offered at the Bijou of late are so full of diversified entertainment, quick action, tuneful musical numbers and original comedy, with the result that the performance is probably one of the most pleasing that has been offered at the Bijou this season. "Along the Pike" is presented in two scenes, one representing a country home of an old squire where a theatrical troupe lands and makes merry, and the second scene shows the exterior of the Midway along the Pike.

"Miss Daisy Hopkins."

"When did you see Conley there the first time?"

"About the first of January."

"What was he doing?"

"He was sitting near the door when I went in."

"Was the door open when you came back out?"

"Well, he got up and opened it."

WENT DOWN LADDER.

"Where did you go in the building with Daisy Hopkins?"

The witness pointed again to the enclosure in the basement.

"Did you ever go down these stairs here?" asked Mr. Rosser, indicating the back stairs which it had been testified were nailed up months ago.

"No, I always went down this ladder," said Dalton, pointing to the ladder near the elevator."

"Where have you lived for the last year, Mr. Dalton?"

The witness gave an address on Hunter street.

"Where have you worked this year?"

"For the Western and Atlantic railroad."

"What kind of work do you do?"

"Carpenter work."

"Where did you work last year?"

"I worked for contractors."

The witness enumerated several contract jobs on which he worked last year, he said.

"Have you been absent from Atlanta in the last ten years?"

"Not for more than a week at a time."

"Whom else did you work for last year beside Mr. Heflin?"

Witness mentioned a Mr. McGinnis.

"Whom did you work for the year before that?"

Witness named Mr. McGinnis.

"Where did you live last year?"

"137 East Hunter street."

"Can you come any nearer telling the time when you met Frank in his office than sometime between September and December?"

"I don't remember."

IN THE AFTERNOON.

"What time of day was it?"

"Between 2 and 3 o'clock."

"Was the window of his office open?"

"Sometimes."

"Were there any curtains on the windows?"

"I never saw any."

"You saw two windows in each office, didn't you?"

"I don't know."

"Which office did you go into, the inner office or the outer office?"

"I went into the one next to the stairway."

"Do you know where the desk is in Mr. Frank's office?"

"I won't be sure, except I think I saw it sitting next to the wall."

"Have you see Frank this year?"

"No."

"You haven't seen him since last fall?"

"I have not."

SAW CONLEY ON EVERY VISIT.

"Did you see Conley each time you went through the factory?"

"Yes, I saw him each time."

"Who was the watchman, at the time you saw a watchman there? Was he a negro each time?"

"Yes, he was a negro each time.'

"Who was the watchman you saw there this year?"

"He was a negro."

"When did you go there this year?"

"I went once on Saturday night, I think it was in January."

"Did you ever live in Walton county?"

"Yes, sir. I lived there about twenty years."

"Where did you go when you left there?"

"Same here."

"Were you absent from Walton county at any time while you lived there?"

"Yes."

"Where did you go?"

"I went to various places."

"Weren't you absent once for quite a long while?"

"Yes, I was in Lawrenceville once for two or three years."

"When was that?"

"I don't remember."

"Why did you go there?"

"My father moved there and lived there a while."

"Did you ever go to the factory with anyone besides Daisy Hopkins?"

MET OTHER GIRLS.

"No, but I've been to the corner there several times, near the Busy Bee, waiting to meet girls, and go home with them."

"Whom did you meet there? Can you name some of them?"

The witness mentioned several names.

"Where were you born?"

"I don't know."

"Well, where were you when you waked up?"

"I was in Lawrenceville, I think."

"Up to ten years ago you lived in Gwinnett and Walton counties exclusively?"

"Yes, the longest time I was away from home was two weeks, when I was in Alabama."

Mr. Dorsey took up the re-direct examination.

"Did you pay Conley anything?"

"Did you give Jim Conley any money?"

"Yes, I gave him a quarter every time I was there."

"When was that?"

"About once a week for about six weeks."

"Did Frank ever have anything to drink in his office?"

"Yes, sometimes he would have cold drinks."

"Did he ever have anything intoxicating?"

"Yes, beer once."

"Did you ever see any of the women up there doing stenographic work?"

"No."

By Attorney Rosser: "You say you saw beer there? Every time?"

"No, not every time. Usually there'd be a waiter full of cold drinks there." The witness specified several soft drinks.

BEER AND WOMEN.

"Well, what women were there when he had the beer?" continued Mr. Rosser.

"There were two besides Daisy Hopkins."

"Describe them."

"I didn't pay any attention to anybody but Daisy."

"She must have been pretty," said Mr. Rosser.

"Just as pretty as a girl can be," returned the witness.

"Can you fix the date of the first visit any nearer than you have done?"

"No, sir."

The witness was excused, and City Detective S. L. Rosser was called.

"Did you see Mrs. Arthur White on April 28?"

"Yes."

"When did Mrs. White first mention to you that she saw a negro as she came down out of the factory about 12:50 on April 26?"

Attorney Rosser objected.

"When did you first know that she claimed to have 'seen a negro?"

"On May 5 or 7."

"Whom did you learn it from?"

"From her."

"Did you ever ask her about a negro?" asked Attorney Rosser.

"I don't think so. She volunteered the information."

Before the witness was excused Solicitor Dorsey asked:

"Did you search around the elvator on the first floor of thef actory?"

DIDN'T FIND BLUDGEON.

"Yes, on Monday or Tuesday."

The bloody stick said to have been found by the defense, and an umbrella handle, were exhibited to the witness by the solicitor.

"Were these there when you made the search?" asked the solicitor.

"No, sir."

"You took some chips to Dr. Claude Smith, didn't you?"

"Yes."

The solicitor exhibited some chips and asked: "Are these the chips?"

"They are the same."

Attorney Rosser: "You mean they look like the same?"

"No, they are the same."

BLUDGEON THERE TWO YEARS?

"Don't you know that this roller," continued Attorney Rosser, referring to the bloody stick, "had been down there for two years?"

"It was not there when I made the search."

The witness was excused. Solicitor Dorsey tendered in evidence the bloody shirt found by the detectives at Newt Lee's house. There was no objection. The solicitor tendered the chips in evidence. Attorney Rosser objected, saying that they had not been identified properly. Judge Roan said, "That's for the jury to judge. We'll let them in."

"Now, your honor," said the solicitor, "we want the cash book and the bank book showing the cash on hand April 26 and the deposits on about Monday or Tuesday or any time during the following week; and the officials of the National Pencil company have promised to produce them. I ask your honor to help me get them here."

COURT TAKES RECESS.

"There'll be no trouble about getting the books. We'll get them here," said Mr. Arnold.

"When we get these boks here, and when Dr. Harris has finished his testimony, the state will rest," said Solicitor Dorsey. The solicitor explained "Dr. Harris can't sleep at night, and it was with difficulty that I got him here at all. He has promised to come down some time during the day." Mr. Dorsey intimated that he expected the defense to go ahead, and that Dr. Harris could be interposed. Mr. Arnold and Mr. Rosser preferred not to do that, and Dr. Harris was called by telephone at his residence, agreeing to come into court at 10 o'clock Court recessed until that hour, at 9:45 o'clock.

DR. HARRIS ON STAND.

Dr. Harris arrived in court at 11:05 o'lock and the jury was brought back and resumed its place. Dr. Harris went upon the stand.

Mr. Arnold resumed his cross-examination of the witness. Dr. Harris admitted that nervous influences and certain things taken on the stomach retard digestion, but declared that nobody knows to what extent it is retarded. There is very little known on the subject, he said.

He continued that some people say that sleep retards digestion while others say that it aids it. It is the same way with walking after a meal. He himself has not experimented much along this line, said he, and it would be only after long and tedious experiment that any definite data could be obtained.

He admitted that mental activity retards digestion to some unknown extent. Little, if anything, said he, can be told about the process of digestion by external indication when a person suffers very much from indigestion, but many people suffer mildly from indigestion for years without knowing it.

Dr. Harris said that medical men generally assume that blood goes toward the stomach to aid digestion; that there is more blood there while digestion is going on.

SOMETHING NOT DEFINITE.

He said that there are no definite facts known as to how long it takes substances not digested to pass out of the stomach. It is recognized that some substances are neither digested nor emulsified while they are in the stomach.

Mr. Arnold asked him if cabbage stalks do not sometimes pass out of the stomach without ever having been affected.

He said that they do not pass out that way from a normal subject. He admitted that grains of corn and peas, when swallowed whole, might not be affected even by a normal stomach.

He said that nobody can tell where most vegetables are digested. Parts of vegetables are digested in one place, and parts in another, he said. Mr. Arnold asked if digestion is not the most mysterious thing with which medical men have to contend.

"It is not," said Dr. Harris. Mr. Arnold asked if man is not the only animal that is omnivorous, except possibly pigs. Dr. Harris said that cats, he thought, are omnivorous, although they eat very little meat.

"I have always understood," said Mr. Arnold, "that the feline species is the most carnivorous of all. Does a wildcat eat anything but meat?"

"I don't know. I have never associated with them."

"How about monkeys?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"They don't eat flesh to any extent, although they do eat insects."

CITES FAMOUS CASE.

Dr. Harris admitted that the investigations of Alexis St. Martin in a famous Canadian case led up to all digestive experiments.

"Isn't the study of digestion in its infancy?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"I wouldn't say that," replied Dr. Harris.

"You don't know the effect on man's digestion as well as you know the effect on animals, do you?"

"You do as far as the stomach alone is concerned," said Dr. Harris.

"What is laid down by science as the hardest vegetable to digest?"

"I never heard of any."

"Well, isn't cabbage laid down as one of the hardest?"

"I have seen that statement but experiments have shown that it does not necessarily prove true."

Attorney Arnold read a transcript of the evidence of Dr. Harris on direct examination, relating to his examination of Mary Phagan's stomach.

"What did you find out about the bread you found there?"

"Practically speaking, there had been no wigestion of it at all."

"Did you call in any other chemist you make these tests?"

"No, sir."

"You did it all yourself, then?"

"I did."

ONLY IN STOMACH HALF HOUR.

"And you didn't call in any representative of this man?"

"No, sir."

"All you are willing to say is that this material in the stomach had been acted on only half an hour. You wouldn't undertake to say that it had only been in the stomach that long, would you?"

"Yes, I would. It couldn't have been in there longer and not been subject to digestion."

Dr. Harris reiterated that there was absolute evidence that the little girl had suffered violence of some kind.

Dr. Hurt made a visual observation. Was the dilation noticeable to him?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"He could not have seen with his eye all that I saw with the microscope."

Dr. Harris continued that he found dilation of the blood vesels or hemorrhages in the tissue.

"These hemorrhages, doctor—were they visible to the eeye?"

"No. I observed them under the microscope."

"And you couldn't tell by visual examination, whether there were hemorrhages present or not?"

"No."

"And there were hemorrhages scattered through the tissues?"

"Yes, sir."

"And the blood vessels and tissues were swollen?"

"Yes, indicating diffusion of the blood."

"Could you see the blood vessels with the naked eye?"

"No; it was necessary to use a microscope."

"How much were these blood vessels swollen?"

BLOOD VESSELS ENLARGED.

"Perhaps two-thirds more than their normal size. Maybe double."

"There is no way to determine what was their natural size?"

"No, not definitely."

"If I get a bruise on my hand, could you look through teh microscope and tell whether the blood had come out of the vessels or not?"

"Yes, sir."

"I believe you said in your testimony about the skull wound that there was no pressure on the brain?"

"Practically none."

"Was the cut through to the skull?"

"Oh, yes."

"Well, what arteries were cut?"

"There are only small arteries there."

"Well, bleeding comes from the veins and arteries, does it not, doctor?"

"Yes."

"Well, what artery was on the skull at the base of this wound?"

"There was no particular large artery under it."

"Did you notice any blood vessels under the wound?"

"Not especially. There are, of course, blood vessels, veins and small arteries at that point on the skull."

"A wound bleeds more at first, doesn't it and the flow of blood diminishes with time?"

"Yes, sir."

"Right where the injury was inflicted you would expect to find the greatest flow of blood?"

"Yes, sir."

"You say this injury couldn't have produced death?"

"No, sir, certainly not."

"Did you find any blood on the brain inside the skull and beneath this wound?"

"Yes, sir. I found about one drop of blood—a sort of effusion."

"This wound couldn't have affected the mental or bodily functions?"

"Not so far as the killing is concerned."

Mr. Arnold concluded his cross-examination. Solicitor Dorsey asked some additional questions.

"With reference to these poisons that Mr. Arnold asked you about yesterday, doctor, did you find any poison in any of the membranes?"

"No, sir, there couldn't possibly have been any irritating poisons such as carbolic acid, bichloride of mercury, or other poisonous salts. If there had been they would have shown up on the membranous surfaces."

"Your examination would have developed this fact?"

"Yes, sir, any quantity of these poisons sufficient to produce an effect would have been noticeable."

CABBAGE IN EVIDENCE.

Solicitor Dorsey offered in evidence the samples of cabbage—first the little jar containing the cabbage taken from Mary Phagan's stomach; second, the two jars of cabbage taken from the stomachs of other persons, alive. Mr. Arnold was willing to admit the sample taken from the dead girl's stomach, but objected to the others as illegal, irrelevant and immaterial. He said that the conditions of these other stomachs had not been shown to be the same as the condition of Mary Phagan's stomach. Solicitor Dorsey insisted that the cabbage had been cooked in the same manner for the other subjects; that it had been eaten in the same manner; that it had remained in the stomach a definite period; that these other stomachs were normal.

"We don't want to argue it," said Mr. Arnold. "We merely want to get our objection into the record."

Judge Roan permitted the introduction of the exhibits.

Solicitor Dorsey then called on the defense for the pencil factory cash book and financial statements. They were not in court, and the solicitor announced that the state rested its case.

It was agreed among the attorneys that three witnesses for the state—N. V. Darley, E. F. Holloway and Harry Scott—could be called back to the stand by the defense.

DEFENSE OPENS WITH CHILDS.

Dr. Leroy Childs, the first witness for the defense, branded as a couple of remarkable guesses the testimony by Dr. Harris and Dr. Hurt, who were witnesses for the state. Dr. Childs stated that he is a surgeon, and has been engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in Atlanta for the past five years. He graduated from Michigan, said he, in 1906; served later in a hospital.

Mr. Arnold asked the witness this hypothetical question:

"Say a body was found at 3 o'clock and rigor mortis was not complete. It was embalmed at 10 o'clock. It was taken up nine days later and a post mortem performed. Behind the ear was a wound cutting through to the skull, which one doctor says was 2 1-4 and another said was 1 1-2 inches long. There was a single drop of blood on the inside of the skull, but this did not in any way affect the brain or brain tissues. Could a physician performing this post mortem say definitely that this blow produced unconsciousness?"

ONLY A GUESS, HE SAYS.

"He could simply hazard a guess," said Dr. Childs.

"Would a blow on the body after death produce the same effects as a blow before death?"

"Yes, if it was inflicted within a cer-

MEN and RELIGION BULLETIN No. 71

The Numbers 4, 11, 21, in Georgia

When you have destroyed the boy's pride and honor,
When you have killed the soul of the girl,
This year,
Next year to adopt
Probation and a home for the wayward
Will not help them or their mothers
For those now in need we plead.

Cholera serum for hogs has been provided.

Good!

Protection for cows from the tick—

Fine!

Expert knowledge of bugs and chemicals to save and foster our crops—

Splendid!

Higher education for men and boys—

Excellent!

But the miserable—the unfortunate—those who are slipping down into the slime which underlies—What of these?

In one home lives a mother. Her boy cut four stalks of sugar cane and with another boy stole them from a field.

Your courts and ours fined them forty dollars apiece.

They were strangers, one nineteen and the other twenty. They had thirty cents between them, and no friends. Eight months in our chaingang was their sentence for not having forty dollars each. A minister found them in stripes at Christmas. He got them out. Their parents had not known of their plight.

IS THIS RIGHT? You can—you will prevent the recurrence of such cases. Pass the Probation Bill. Give your Judge the power to save first offenders.

E. C. Branson, of the Normal College at Athens, states that crime has increased in Georgia since 1880 approximately twice as fast as the population.

Think of this. Then consider Illinois.

In that state, commitments have decreased forty per cent in the ten years since the adoption of the Indeterminate Sentence, despite the great increase of population. Half of the states have incorporated the Indeterminate Sentence in their laws.

Its aim is "to retain the convict in prison until he is fitted for freedom, making such fitness for freedom the condition precedent of his release."

IT WILL ENCOURAGE ROAD BUILDING.

To the fear of the lash, it adds a far greater incentive, the hope of winning freedom by good work.

Senate Bill No. 11 provides for Probation. Senate Bill No. 21 covers the Indeterminate Sentence. The Senate has passed both of them without opposition. And the Judiciary Committee of the House has again favorably reported both Bills for passage in the House.

To incorporate them into the laws of Georgia only an opportunity for a vote in the House is needed.

With them goes House Bill No. 4. This provides the home for wayward girls. They today are the pressing problems in our courts. They are prisoners. Yet you would not place them in the chaingang or with hardened criminals.

Since you will not do that with a boy under sixteen, for whom you provide a home, you can scarcely do it with a girl.

And yet the State has to care for them.

While providing serum for sick hogs, and a tick cure for cattle, and horticulture and entomology for our fields, and college training for our boys, surely you will provide for these, our girls.

The Prison Commission urges this. The Appropriations Committee and the Penitentiary Committee report favorably House Bill No. 4.

THESE NUMBERS, 4, 11 and 21, entitle these bills to a hearing.

But more than this, the meaning of these measures to Georgia and the unfortunate—that there is nothing in them for anyone excepting the miserable at the bottom of the pit—these facts make certain, we believe, that they will be heard and made the law of our State.

Stop and think of the homes they touch.

And you will urge and give the right of way.

Remember the purpose of the Crucified—

Jesus died, not alone that you might live, but "to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death."

DR. HARRIS' TESTIMONY IS ATTACKED

tain time—say one to three hours."

"Then you would say that this blow as described could have been inflicted after death?"

"Yes."

"Would any statement that it could not have been inflicted, be anything but a guess?"

"No, not if the wound has been fully described to me."

"The difficulties of getting definite information would be increased or decreased on account of the fact that a post mortem examination was made nine days after death?"

"They would be increased because certain physical changes set in even after a body has been embalmed, and the burning and the exhumation in themselves would make a change. For instance, a body a few hours after death weighs less than at the time of death."

"With such a blow as I have described, could a person have remained conscious?"

"Certainly."

"Doctor, people have remained conscious with their skulls fractured, haven't they?"

"In my own experience I have seen people conscious with both tables of the skull fractured."

"Have you ever heard any opinion given as to unconsciousness with so little data before physicians?"

"No, I have not."

"In fact, doctor, a blow might not show anything on the surface and at the same time render a person unconscious or even produce death?"

"A blow could produce death with only a slight swelling," said Dr. Childs. "I have known of persons being rendered unconscious for many hours by the blow from a sandbag, and even of their being killed without any external sign."

"In that case, doctor, the concussion causes the death? And where concussion causes the death, there is seldom any external sign, is there?"

CABBAGE HARD TO DIGEST.

"No, very seldom."

"How is cabbage classed among foods?"

"As a carbo-hydrate."

"Are carbo-hydrates considered hard to digest?"

"Not as a fast rule."

"Is cabbage considered a hard food to digest?"

"It is generally considered the hardest."

"Doesn't cabbage vary? Compare an old woody cabbage with a frash, watery one?"

"I can only say that fresh vegetables are easier to digest."

"Where does digestion begin?"

"In the mouth."

Attorney Arnold directed the attention of the witness to the samples of cabbage produced by Dr. Harris. Designating the sample taken from Mary Phagan's stomach, he asked: "Tell me if that is masticated thoroughly, in your opinion?"

"Certainly not thoroughly," responded Dr. Childs.

"Does that cabbage look like it had been thoroughly cooked?"

"I wouldn't say."

"Is raw cabbage harder or easier to digest than cooked?"

"Raw is easier."

"What per cent of carbo-hydrate is there in cabbage, doctor?"

"Between 7 and 8 per cent."

"This is all of the cabbage affected by saliva in the mouth, is it not?"

"Yes."

DIGESTION RETARDED IN STOMACH.

"Does the stomach do anything toward digestion of cabbage?"

"It has a physical influence. By churning it may break up particles of cabbage."

Dr. Childs said that the juices of the stomach retard rather than aid the digestion of cabbage, and that the next real stage of digestion after cabbage leaves the mouth is in the intestine.

"Where is the process of digesting cabbage finally completed?"

"In the small intestines."

Attorney Arnold directed the attention of the witness again to the cabbage taken from Mary Phagan's stomach. "How long would it be before you would expect pieces such as that to get out of the stomach?" he asked.

"Authorities give four and a half hours for cabbage to pass out. There is no absolute rule, however. This varies widely."

"If you find cabbage up to the very second it leaves the stomach, it is still undigested, isn't it?"

"In a sense, yes."

"Isn't it possible for parts of the cabbage to pass through all the digestive organs and out of the body still undigested?"

"Yes."

"Aren't there many things that retard digestion?"

RETARDING DIGESTION.

Dr. Childs then named a number of physical influences which would retard digestion, among them being excitement and violent exercise.

"Well, you might find substances in the stomach that had remained there a long time, might you not?"

"Yes."

"Hasn't every stomach its individual idiosyncrasies much as has the brain?"

"Absolutely."

Attorney Arnold asked another hypothetical question. "Take a human body that has been interred nine days. Take out the stomach and in the contents find cabbage and certain remnants of wheat bread. Could you hazard an opinion or a guess that that person had taken it into his stomach one-half or three-quarters of an hour before death?"

"I certainly could not. I don't think anybody could hazard a guess within an hour."

COURT RECESSED.

"Well, isn't it impossible for anybody to state accurately and positively within two hours, doctor?"

"I wouldn't attempt to advance such an opinion myself."

"How long is it possible for cabbage like this to remain in the stomach?"

"I should say it is possible for it to remain there twelve hours."

"Digestion begins slowly, doesn't it doctor?"

"Yes."

"Now, take common wheat biscuits. How long before they commence to pass out of the stomach?"

"I should say two hours and a half."

Court recessed at 12:30, with Dr. Childs still on the stand under direct examination by the defense. He will resume at 2 o'clock.

DEFENSE FIGHTS HIS TESTIMONY

—Staff Photo by Winn.

DR. H. F. HARRIS,

Secretary of state board of health, who has been a great aid to state in Frank case. Having failed to shake him on cross-examination, the defense is seeking to contradict his testimony by that of other experts.

STARTLING CHARGES HURLED BY SENATOR AT DEPT. OF JUSTICE

We are going to have a judiciary subject to secret influences. I am in favor of popular election and recall of judges."

IN NEW ENGLAND.

Senator Colt, of Rhode Island, declared that in his thirty-one years' experience on the federal bench in New England an attempt had never been made by the department of justice to influence the judges.

He knew, however, that special agents had been sent to New England.

No final action was taken on the attorney general's report.

Lind gets to Mexico and delivers his message there may be a different reply.

"The president has openly sent a personal representative to Mexico, to bring about some arrangement by which peaceful results may be secured. It is his desire that orderly government be restored in Mexico."

PEACEFUL MEANS.

"One way is to attempt to do so by peaceful means; the other is by the strong arm, by force. Who will say that the latter should not be the last to which we should resort?"

Referring to the report from Mexico that Governor Lind would not be received, Senator Bacon said:

"Here is a message sent by one who claims to be an official. It was sent evidently in a moment of temper. I ask you to consider whether there is a condition to require such haste that we cannot permit this representative to deliver his message and receive a reply? When we do receive a reply then will be the time for us to determine whatever is necessary to be done by the government, and whatever necessary will be done."

OPPOSES HASTY ACTION.

The senator declared hasty action on the Clark resolution would not help the situation any, in so far as life or property being imperiled. Such an investigation as Clark proposed, he said, would take time and be of no effect in an emergency.

"The president of the United States is face to face with the gravest emergency that has confronted us since I have been a member of the senate," said Senator Bacon. "It is much graver than that which faced us in the Cuban situation. That was a tempest in a teapot compared with what we may be required to do, to establish order in Mexico, and maintain it for a generation or two.

"And when the president stands face to face with this tremendous responsibility, when he, a man man whose integrity and good faith we all recognize, seeks to settle it, for us to adopt this resolution which can be based on no other basis than the failure of the president's plan, is nothing but to flout him in the face."

"LET WILSON GO AHEAD."

Members of the foreign relations committee without regard to party, had agreed, said Chairman Bacon, to "let the president go ahead with his attempt peacefully to solve the Mexican situation and not to interfere until the present efforts have had fair trial."

The Clark resolution finally was forced aside and can be taken up again only by a vote of the senate.

President Stands Pat On Sending John Lind

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—President Wilson stands pat on the mission of John Lind to Mexico, in spite of the hostile warnings sent out from the City of Mexico through the press reports.

In the first place, the president does not believe Huerta, provisional president of Mexico, has made the statement attributed to him. Mr. Wilson thinks Mr. Huerta would be foolish to say such things before the arrival of Mr. Lind, and therefore Mr. Wilson does not believe Mr. Huerta said them. For, whatever the opinion of the president of the means by which Huerta made himself president of Mexico, Mr. Wilson is far from the opinion that Huerta is a fool.

In the next place, should it prove correct that Huerta has said he would pronounce Mr. Lind persona non grata unless he comes with proper recognition of the Huerta government from the government of the United States, President Wilson still stands pat.

LIND'S STANDING.

He says it is doubtful if Mr. Huerta is asked to receive or recognize Mr. Lind. Mr. Lind's standing in the Mexican capital will not rest upon any credentials he may carry to the alleged de facto government of that country. He has gone there in the capacity of adviser to the American embassy, and whatever he may have to say to Mr. Huerta naturally will be said through the man in charge of the embassy, one astute individual named Nelson O'Shaughnessy.

While Mr. Lind can do business in this way with Huerta without giving the individual an opportunity to offer humiliation to the United States, he will be free at the same time to talk with all the conflicting elements of Mexico. As far as the president is concerned he says he will decline to believe or take stock in any of the many reports emanating from Mexico. He will not believe Huerta said what he is alleged to have said until he has confirmation from John Lind. One of the things John Lind went to Mexico for was to get the truth, and the president is patient to await his investigations and report.

of the distribution will be general throughout the agricultural section.

Secretary McAdoo, whose whole time is occupied with the affairs of the department, left to Assistant Secretary Williams the detailed explanation of the plan. The meeting was held behind closed doors. Mr. Williams declared that the department had not decided upon a hard and fast rule concerning the transfer of the money to the southern banks and that the purpose of the conference was to obtain from the bankers themselves their ideas as to the general scheme. He emphasized the invitation of Secretary McAdoo that the bankers present take the department into their confidence concerning their idea as to the most practicable and effective means of rendering real service to the country through the distribution of the fund. He emphasized also the purpose of the department to require the city banks participating in the fund to take care of their country correspondents on a reasonable basis.

The basis of security for the deposits was discussed by Assistant Secretary Williams and he suggested that the bankers in their statements indicate their ideas as to the class of commercial paper that should be accepted by the department. Practically all of the morning session was devoted to the speeches of Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Williams, and at the afternoon session the bankers will speak with perfect freedom concerning their ideas as to how the fund should be distributed. The remarks of the bankers will be reported stenographically and will be considered by the department in its allotment of the fund.

Mr. Williams asked all bankers who have not already made written requisition for a part of the funds to indicate the amount their respective banks can handle effectively and the general demands of the section in which they are located.

While non of the requests of the southern banks have been given out as yet, and it is not likely will be published until the list is complete, it is understood that the requests from the south alone are sufficient to exhaust the entire fifty million that the department intends to distribute in the south and west.

SMITH ANXIOUS.

Senator Hoke Smith called yesterday and again today upon Secretary McAdoo and Assistant Secretary Williams, and urged that the number of places in Georgia in which money is to be deposited by the treasury department should be increased so as to more thoroughly meet the needs of the state in handling the cotton crop.

The secretary said that the banks which receive money in the Georgia cities would be advised that the purpose of the treasury department was to aid in moving the crops and that they would be expected to utilize these funds furnished by the treasury department as far as possible to contribute to this end.

He has not finally decided whether he will be able to enlarge the number of places in Georgia where money can be deposited. He is very anxious to do so, but fears his lack of proper facilities under the law as it now stands.

Owen Introduces Bill To Maintain Bond Value

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Chairman Owen, of the senate banking committee, introduced a bill today to authorize the treasury to buy outstanding 2 per cent bonds from banks at par and interest, if the banks owning them so desire. The measure is intended to prevent depreciation of the two's.

Senator Owen's plan is to cancel outstanding gold certificates as they come into the treasury; issue treasury notes, redeemable in gold in their stead; transfer the gold represented by the gold certificates to the redemption division; cancel the 2 per cent bonds; issue 2 per cents in their stead, and supplant national bank notes with treasury notes.

The Legislature's Duty To the People.

The few days remaining to the Legislature in its present session must be turned to the most thoughtful and workmanly account, if the public interests of Georgia are to be spared the grave injustice and injury with which they are now menaced. A number of bills that lie very close to the people's daily welfare are awaiting passage but unless the House and Senate work with the utmost possible expedition these important measures will not reach a conclusive vote. Of paramount concern, however, is the need of a speedy agreement on some effective plan of tax reform in order that the State's revenues may be made commensurate with its pinching necessities. This matter cannot be neglected without heavy misfortune to our schools and to all those institutions and enterprises which make for progress and public well-being.

It has long been evident that the State's interests demand more revenue, that additional funds must be had in order that the government may discharge the plainest duties to its citizens. This need now appears especially urgent in view of reports from the Comptroller General's office, showing that the State's source of calculable income is thus far more than a million dollars less than it was in 1912. Fifty-four counties among the ninety-odd heard from show an aggregate decrease of over five million dollars in tax returns.

The Senate has already reduced the House appropriations bill by some two hundred and eighty thousand dollars, a reduction which involves the deplorable, though now necessary, sacrifice of many important and highly worthy claims. But if the present indications of the Comptroller's office continue, even this big cut will not suffice to square appropriations with anticipated income. There must be a further lopping away of funds granted to the common schools, to the colleges, to pensions, to agricultural development and protection and to other activities upon which the State's security and prosperity depend.

That is to say, this must be done, unless the House and the Senate reach a prompt agreement on some adequate measure of tax equalization whereby the State's income can be made to meet its needs. But if such a measure is adopted, instead of cutting down appropriations, which within themselves are entirely reasonable, it will be possible to put them through or to increase them.

The Legislature must choose between these two courses: it must either deprive our public institutions of the means of subsistence or it must provide a larger State income. The latter course is certainly the wise and just one to pursue, the one that is in keeping with the people's rights and welfare. It is not necessary to increase taxes, it is only necessary to equalize them among all citizens and all counties in order to secure ample revenues.

To this end the Legislature should work vigorously and harmoniously during its few remaining days; and to this end it must work, unless it is to fail in its duty to the people.

Meanwhile Japan is worrying along without a scrap.

Huerta probably argues that he didn't seek the office for nothing.

Ex-President Taft probably wishes Ambassador Wilson hadn't shown that letter of commendation.

Rockefeller says he is still a boy, but some of his old time competitors will doubtless probably doubt the sincerity of that statement.

The South and the Currency Bill.

"When the South harvests a cotton crop worth a billion dollars it needs a lot of money to pay its hands and meet the planters' other obligations. This demand for money creates a scarcity and interest rates go up. In some localities no loans are to be had at all commensurate with the needs. So the crop is dumped on the market for what it will bring. It has been estimated that a responsive financial system would enable the farmers of the South to save more than a hundred million dollars in a year, through their ability to hold the crop until they could market it to better advantage."

Simply and succinctly, the Kansas City Star thus presents the South's peculiar interest in the cause of banking and currency revision. While every section of the country is in urgent need of a more elastic monetary system, the South is desperately so, for, here the value of our natural wealth and of the very sources of our material well-being is crushed and held down for the lack of money and credit in crucial seasons. Not only the farmers but also the workers in every field of commerce and industry feel the burden and the injury of such conditions.

The action of the treasury department in offering between twenty-five and fifty millions of the Government's money to Southern and Western banks on terms that can easily be met relieves the situation for the immediate future. But the important thing is that such relief should be permanently available. The pending currency bill, if enacted, will make this special grant of the treasury department automatically operative whenever occasion demands. The administration's measure should have the support of everyone who is sincerely interested in currency and banking reform on general principles; it should have the support of all Southern Congressmen and Senators be*cause of this section's peculiarly urgent needs.*

Strange things have happened; and the Atlanta team may yet win that pennant.

The Hero of the Air.

The aerial hero of the year 1913 is a French boy not yet twenty-one, Marcel Brindejonc Des Moulinais —"a streaming name with a tail like a comet." France is famous for its intrepid aviators, who seem more than those of any other country to have the glowing gift of imagination, but never has it produced an airman whose mingled endurance and skill are comparable to those of this slender youth. His record flight of three thousand miles from Paris to St. Petersburg and back again, made in the face of all kinds of weather from calm to storm, is perhaps the most remarkable achievement in the entire history of aviation.

Des Moulinais is picturesquely described by a current writer as " a beardless boy with a D'Artagnan nose and an eye that might have belonged to Aramis. Before he was well into his teens, he had shown rare ability in mechanics. A few years after the Wrights in America had demonstrated the possibilities of the heavier-than-air flying craft Des Moulinais was master of a monoplane. With the opening of the present year, he began a series of exploits that earned him world-wide renown. He flew first from Paris to London, a distance of two hundred and eighty-seven miles in a little more than three hours. Then by way of Brussels he flew back to Paris. Next he made a lightning air-voyage from Bremen to London. And finally came his almost incredible flight from Paris to St. Petersburg and return.

"Young Des Moulinais," says the New York Sun, "has done more than any other aviator to prove that the flying machine is the automobile of the air, not extra perilous in competent hands. If any European pilot is to essay the Atlantic passage in this year of grace, destiny indicates him as the pioneer."

The Strength of China's Republic.

The latest revolt in the Chinese republic has failed largely through its own weakness, leaving the established government and the influence of President Yuan Shih-Kai stronger than before. This rebellion seems to have enlisted little or no support except among disappointed politicians and certain ragged remnants from the army that engaged in the first great revolution, "disbanded and often unpaid soldiers," as one writer describes them, "who found marauding a more congenial occupation than their ordinary industries."

The dominant thought and purpose of the Chinese people are undoubtedly back of the Republic. There are slow-minded, ignorant masses who perhaps are but vaguely aware of the momentous changes which have recently come to pass in their country and whose attitude counts for little one way or the other. There are others who are rather suspicious of the present administration, yet who are waiting quietly and patiently, hoping that it will really promote freedom and progress. But the majority of thoughtful and patriotic Chinese appear to be loyally supporting the government.

Of the Southern provinces that declared their independence when the recent rebellion broke out, all but one have returned to the federal fold. The insurgent forces have been routed and in some in*stances their own leaders have fallen* victim to the spirit of anarchy and terrorism they kindled in reckless adventurers. The complete unification of a country so vast in its extent and so diverse in its language and people as is China will necessarily require long years. But that the young Republic has begun under favorable stars and has thus far moved constructively forward, no one can gainsay.

Where is the old fashioned calamity howler of Wall street? Has McAdoo shown him?

PUBLIC BATHS

By Frederic J. Haskin

The modern public bath, which affords pleasure and comfort to thousands of people each day, is really a revival of one of the oldest institutions in the world. The public bath was in high favor in the palmy days of the Roman empire. It is said that the city of Rome contained at least 850 public bath houses, and archaeologists find the remains of a public bath wherever Grecian or Roman civilization is known to have existed. Rich and poor, slave and freeman, enjoyed free bathing privileges in an abundant water supply provided by the city.

• • •

In those ancient days, the bath was an institution for pleasure as well as for personal cleanliness. Men and women frequently bathed together with little regard for the distinctions of sex, and much undue license resulted. Consequently the Christians regarded the bath as a source of evil and it was not in public favor for centuries. A general lack of cleanliness resulted, and scientists longed for the days of the Romans when personal cleanliness was considered essential and no one could plead a lack of water for bathing. Within the past half century the public bath has again come to delight civilized man, and it is now conducted with a due regard for the conventionalities in order to disarm adverse criticism.

• • •

The first public baths established in this country were opened in Boston in 1866. Six were opened at first and they were so located as to be within easy reach of the city's poor. By 1897 the number had increased to fourteen. New York was the first state to pass compulsory legislation compelling the establishment of the bath. A bill passed by the legislature in 1895 required every city having a population of over 50,000 to be provided with baths which should be kept open all the year. Cities having a population of less than 50,000 were privileged to establish baths if desired, and all public baths were required to be provided with both hot and cold water. The first city to comply with this new law, and probably the first city in the United States to provide all the requirements for bathing comfort, was Yonkers. A finely equipped public bath house was opened there on Labor day in 1896. Two years later Philadelphia opened its first free public bath house equipped for 3,000 baths a day.

• • •

Aside from the public baths established by the municipalities, a large number of institutions have established free baths in connection with their charitable or educational work. Most of these antedated the municipal bath houses and some of them are being discontinued since the municipal baths have been established. The Young Men's Christian association has provided bathing and swimming pools in all of its largest buildings. In some of them these privileges are confined exclusively to members and in others nonmembers can use them by the payment of a small fee. Gymnasiums connected with colleges and schools, as well as different kinds of clubs and organizations, have provided bathing facilities to a limited number of persons.

• • •

The number of deaths by drowning each year is causing an increased interest in the value of swimming for all classes of people. Because of this the modern public bath serves two purposes, that of cleanliness and of providing facilities for learning to swim. The physical education movement has done much to aid in the establishment of the modern public bath facilities. Every all-round athlete realizes the value of swimming as a physical exercise, aside from its utility in preserving human life.

• • •

Swimming pools have been established in only a few of the public schools in this country. The Paul Revere school of Boston was the first in this country to have this convenience, although a year or two later it was provided for several schools in Brookline. The directors of physical culture in many towns are endeavoring to include swimming lessons in the physical work of the public schools. Where a sufficient water supply is available this easily can be done. One elementary school in Chicago last year made the claim that for three years no child had reached the eighth grade without being able to swim. When the pools could not be added to the school building the physical culture teachers took the children to the public baths which had swimming pools attached.

• • •

The addition of a swimming pool to the public bath has done much to improve the personnel of the people who go there. The first public baths, being established merely to aid in personal cleanliness, were patronized chiefly by persons who had insufficient bathing facilities at home. They were especially useful to the tenement residents in the great cities, including the immigrant class. Comparatively few Americans went to the earlier public baths until the swimming pool was added.

• • •

Society people in many cities now patronize the public swimming pool. In Washington a line of automobiles may be seen in front of the public bath buildings, especially upon ladies' day. The bathers include a goodly sprinkling of foreigners from the diplomatic circles. Little girls of titled families acquire true democracy by swimming with American school girls.

• • •

A model public bathing plant includes a number of pools of varying depth. The first having a depth of about three feet will be used by the small children. Beginners will be allowed to paddle around in it until they have acquired the swimming motion. The other pools are deeper, the deepest being usually about ten feet. This is usually entered by a diving board, and no one is permitted to go into it who is not fully able to swim. The supply of attendants in a properly equipped bath is sufficient to provide against any probable accident and each attendant is capable of giving free instruction in swimming. Before entering the pool each person is required to go under the shower in order to avoid a shock in entering directly into the water.

• • •

In towns where the number of pools is not sufficient to provide accommodations for both sexes, the days are divided alternately between them. Sometimes ladies are permitted to have escorts but this is frequently forbidden. Each person entering the bath is required to register name, age and residence in case of possible accident. The registry card is presented to the caretaker who gives out the checks for the lockers. Most of these are individual so that a bather has absolute privacy in dressing and undressing and no one is permitted to enter a public pool without a suitable bathing costume.

• • •

The patrons of the public baths include all ages and classes of people. The school children are most enthusiastic. Occasionally mothers and daughters will go into the pools together, and one lively old lady has been attending the bathing pool regularly accompanied by her daughter and three grandchildren. Her smallest grandson takes great pride in the fact that he taught his grandmother to swim, and when the old lady dropped off the diving board into the deep pool the air was rent with enthusiastic cheers.

• • •

With the development of the public bath, however, came a menace of disease which scientific people have already begun to provide for. An investigation made by the department of bacteriology of the Chicago university reported five cases of epidemics supposed to be the result of bathing in rivers or pools where contamination existed. The exercise of stringent restrictions preventing persons afflicted with certain diseases from entering public baths is being authorized by the authorities in charge of most of them. In addition to this precaution some means of purifying the water must be provided for every standard pool.

THE COLYUM CONDUCTOR'S SONG.

With genuflexions to "The Gardener's Song," from "Sylvia and Bruno."

He thought he saw a Perfect Pome
In "Sweltering in Town;"
He looked again, and found the bulb
Had suddenly gone down.
"The weather is a fitful thing,"
He murmured, with a frown.

He thought he saw a chance to pen
A pome on politics;
He looked again, and found it was
A quarter after six.
"I feel a strong desire,' he said,
"With provender to mix."

He thought he saw a chance to pull
A Mexicano wheeze;
He looked again, and found it was
A piece of cottage cheese.
(Condone the dreadful slang, I beg
You in parentheses).

He thought he saw a contribu-
Tion from a good contrib;
He looked again, and found it was
A feeble cachinnation.
"Poor thing," he said, "poor silly thing,
I need a long vacation."

He thought he saw a Contribu-
. Tion from a good Contrib;
He looked again, and found it was
A sempiternal squib
About the name of Abel Crook—
Or one just as ad lib.

He thought he saw a rhyming chance
Within "The Gardener's Song;"
He looked again, and found it would
Not take him very long.
"I guess it's not so bad," he said,
Nor was he wholly wrong.

Some Ques?n You Said a Bookful.

(From the Keansburg (N. J.) Beacon.)

Mrs. Belmont is the wife of a millionaire scion of a multi-millionaire father, one of the richest bankers of the exclusive Wall Street district.

She is presumably very rich through her husband's patrimony, and that she is assuredly beautiful, all the great Broadway district have for some time recognized that by the unlimited homage which her stage career has amply demonstrated. That she is remarkably gifted in wit, mental equipoise and refnied repartee, those who have met her since she became a resident for the season in Granville Park, at the Belmont Cottage, have liberally conceded. She is hearty in praise of our beaches, the salt bathing, delightfully cool nights, and perfect restful environment.

Voters can see the brilliant actress daily when they cast their ballots for her as their favorite. She will add her bright remarks, her attractive presence and her wide fame as an accompaniment to the carnival spirit, which the coronation of the Queen will start with eclat and vim.

Best of all do we like "exclusive Wall street district." We doubt whether anybody this side of Paradise Junction can tie Mrs. Belmont. She gets our vote, for one.

Sir: Why not a series on the most infallible test of a woman's intelligence? Sitting in front of her at an open air picture show and listening to her comments on the photo plays is my contribution. Of course in the open air theatres conversation is absolutely unrestricted. I sat in front of a gorgeously gowned woman of rare beauty the other night; a woman you'd* stop to ask about. I am quite sure that in ordinary conversation she would pass muster, but when it came to the task of correlating ideas and exercising imagination (powers which are called into play by watching the movies, scoffers to the c. n.) she proved to have the mentality of an undeveloped child of eight or nine. Are there any other entries?

NATIONS AND THE PEOPLE

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

We are slaves to words. Speak often enough of an unreal thing, and after a while it becomes real.

For instance, we have used the word "nation" for centuries. There is, however, no such thing as a nation. All that really exists is the individuals that compose a nation. National pride, national prosperity, national honor, are artificial entities. There are only individual pride, prosperity and honor, singly and collectively. In the arithmetic of politics you cannot add a million people and make a single sum that is a different sort of thing.

Hence talk of justice to nations is nonsense. There is only justice to the people who compose it. There was once high howling of them who thought it an outrage upon the Philippines for the United States to take them over. But if you cease thinking by counters and labels and think of actual folks you will see that the men, women and children in those far off islands are freer, more contented, and have more justice, order and opportunity than they ever possibly could have had under an independence that would certainly have meant endless internal strife. The United States in the Philippines must be judged by the result of government upon the individuals, and not by fictitious sentiment about the rights and feelings of nations.

India is under the rule of England. Whether that rule is justifiable or not depends only upon its effect upon the natives. And British dominion in India does not endure because of the handful of white troops there, but because for the first time in history the common man there can find some protection and justice.

If we Americans could be better governed, happier, and more prosperous under British sway than we now are, I should favor joining the empire at once. Happily, we believe the contrary would be the case.

No government is entitled to respect that is not the free choice of its people, that does not give them order and equity.

If the government of Mexico does not take decent care of the lives, rights and property of its citizens, and of the aliens sojourning there, it has no right to exist.

If it does not represent the free preference of its population, if it holds its power only through connivance and force, it has no right to the consideration or respect of other civilized nations.

Destiny has placed upon the shoulders of the United States a burden of responsibility which cannot be unloaded by the twists and precedents of international law. That responsibility is not to states nor de facto governments; it is to the human beings underneath.

Murder, robbery, mockery of human rights, and semi-barbarism must cease in Mexico, as such things were caused to cease in Cuba, or the United States must interfere, for the same right by which we at present man may interfere to protect a child who is being treated inhumanly by his parent.

The Pilgrim Guadalupe

The chapel of La Santisima Virgin de Guadalupe Hidalgo stands on a hill, the hill on which she first appeared to a humble Mexican shepherd, six miles from the heart of Mexico City, overlooking the ordinarily small village of Guadalupe Hidalgo, where was signed, more than half a century ago, the treaty which ended the war between Mexico and the United States.

The pilgrimage of these Indians—for this is purely an Indian fiesta—culminates on December 12 of each year, the day which has been dedicated to the special worship of the Mexican Virgin. Owing to the long distances over which many of the pilgrims are com*pelled to make their way* on foot, the start from remote sections of Mexico is made about the middle of August, and as these most distant pilgrims pass through the villages and towns on their way to Guadalupe, they gather the faithful from the settlements en route.

Lest any of these should miss the ceremonies, the celebration lasts a full week, terminating on December 15, and commencing, in a small way, about December 8 or 9. Then the first of the horde of worshippers straggles in; incessant but happy ringing of the bells in the chapel and the cathedral at Guadalupe begins, while candles are lighted incessantly and prayers offered every hour, day and night, for the ensuing week.—From the July Wide World Magazine.

JUST SMILES

Past stall after stall went the rich merchant followed by a footman in smart livery. It was the annual village bazar.

"Ah. Mr. Fitzbrendon," said a really sweet and charming lady at one of the stalls, "and what are you going to buy? Dear old auntie and I am running this table and we have home-made cakes, aprons, penwipers, and—"

"Yes," said F., "and I'll buy just one of each. But do you sell kisses at your stall?"

"Oh, certainly!" came the ready reply. "One guinea each!"

"Right!" replied the autocrat. "Then I'll take a couple—and good measure, please!"

"Aunt," remarked the fair and dainty damsel, "forward, please! Two kisses for this gentleman!"

For a moment the man of means was nonplussed, but only for a moment. Then he turned to his servitor:

"James," he said coolly, "just take this purchase, please!"

FOLSOM AGAIN ATTACKS MEDICAL PRACTICE BILL

Says Certain Specialists Are Behind Sections Discriminating Against Opticians

Editor The Journal:

On Monday last your paper published a communication from me in which I pointed out important discrepancies in the medical practice bill now on the calendar of the house. I did not expect that the promoters of this bill would offer reply to my comments, and so far as I know no reply has been attempted to date.

Even the admittedly urgent need of reform in medical education is not a sufficient excuse for passing the bill in its present form. In fact, upon further investigation, I am convinced that the measure as presented at this time should be defeated on general principles.

In my former article I asked: "Is the bill really framed to regulate the legitimate practice of medicine or is it designed to widen the sphere of influence of certain doctors?"

This inquiry was prompted by observing in said bill provisions which attempted to regulate matters entirely outside of the medical profession. Reference is had specifically to that part of section 14 wherein the optician is denied the right to charge for his services—this being a prerogative enjoyed by doctors, only.

Since my last communication I have examined somewhat further into the antecedents of this measure. I am now in position to charge that the bill was originally formulated by certain medical eye specialists and is being especially pushed by them with the hope of conferring particular benefits upon them. In this connection be it understood that the majority of this type of medical specialist, in Georgia, engages, either openly or clandestinely, in the sale of spectacles—contrary to accepted medical ethics.

The bill under discussion was originally concocted in the office of an Augusta medical eye specialist—whose name can be supplied if desired. The frantic antics of this gentleman in his efforts to promote his pet scheme to father his own laws, and at the same time discredit legitimate opticians, afford an interesting—if not really amusing—incident in the proceedings.

At the beginning of the present session a bill was introduced seeking to regulate the work of opticians and requiring them to have certain educational qualifications. A strictly non-medical educational measure. When the Augusta eye specialist heard of this bill he was so incensed at the thought of the opticians endeavoring to regulate their own business—while he was trying to do it for them, in his medical bill—that he actually came all the way to Atlanta and spent a day or more at the capitol, lobbying against the optical bill—said bill having no reference whatever to the legitimate practice of medicine.

Yesterday I read an article, written in support of the medical practice bill, in which it was charged that some of the members of the legislature, who are opposing it, are looking for a "nigger in the woodpile." Does it not look as though their search was really warranted?

If a bill to regulate medical education will be properly drawn and presented at the next session of the legislature I will give of my personal means and time as I can to promote passage of same—for I believe that Georgia should lead the south in the high qualifications of her doctors. But I submit: Is a bill like the present one—obviously fathered by a small coterie seeking personal aggrandizement—worthy of the serious consideration of the present session of the assembly?

Respectfully submitted,

C. E. FOLSOM.

TO HEAR REQUISITIONS FOR ZACHRY FRIDAY

Augusta Man to Face Charge of Wife That He Kidnapped Child

Requisitions drawn by Governor Blease, of South Carolina, against Julian J. Zachry, of Harlem, near Augusta, charging kidnaping, ill treatment of a child, non-support of his wife and another child, will be heard before Governor Slaton on Friday.

Mrs. Zachry some time ago brought action in Augusta to recover her two children from Zachry. She lost the suit, but fled with the children to South Carolina, where she asked Governor Blease's protection.

Zachry, however, managed to get possession of one of the children, little Frances, and the governor then issued the requisitions. Zachry will come to Atlanta with his lawyers and fight the requisition.

Thirty men will be required to operate the plant, according to Engineer Canham, working in eight-hour shifts during the night and day. The salaries will range down to $1.50 a day.

The name of C. H. Mitchell is being favorably considered for the post of chief engineer, and J. A. Day for one of the assistants. Both are Atlantians. A third engineer will be selected before the plant is turned over to the city.

RESOLUTION ON MANSION KILLED BY THE SENATE

Permanent Registration Bill Passed and Bill Abolishing County Treasurers

The state senate passed two bills on Wednesday afternoon, killed one, and postponed action on another.

The bill of Senator Watts, abolishing the office of county treasurer, but leaving such action to the majority vote of the qualified voters of the county concerned, was passed by unanimous vote.

Senator Stark's bill providing for permanent registration was passed by vote of 2 to 2, Senators Harrell and Tyson opposing the measure. By its provisions a voter is registered for life, provided he is registered once, does not die or move from his county, is qualified under the provisions of the state constitution in regard to qualifications of electors, and is registered under the provisions of the code known as the "grandfather" clause.

The senate killed two resolutions in regard to the executive mansion. That of Senator Watts, proposed by substitute, left it in the power of a commission to sell or exchange the property. It was voted down 21 to 19.

Senator McNeil bitterly opposed the resolution, characterizing it as giving too much power for possible "land schemes."

The senate considered a bill making a wife compatible but not compellable to testify against her husband, but action was postponed on the measure.

SOUTHERN AGENTS ARE IN CONVENTION HERE

Hundred Largest Stations of Railway Are Represented in the Attendance

The fifteenth annual convention of agents from the hundred largest stations of the Southern railway system is now in session at the Georgian Terrace hotel. The opening session was held Wednesday, when Mayor Woodward and President Wiley L. Moore, of the Atlanta chamber of commerce, welcomed the visiting agents to Atlanta. President C. G. Walker responded and expressed the pleasure of the agents at meeting in Atlanta.

On Thursday morning the agents went into a session that will last all day. Convention topics were the chief object of discussion. The agents also discussed ways and means to better the service in stations and lessen waste of labor.

Thursday evening the agents are to be entertained with a banquet by the traffic department. On Friday, the third and last day of the convention, a trip will be made over the company's property in Atlanta, especial attention being given to the Inman transfer proposition and the Madison avenue facilities.

A number of prominent Southern railway officials from Washington are also attending the convention.

ARBITRATION TO QUELL ROW IN METAL WORKERS

Committee Appointed to Decide Mooted Questions—Convention Ends Next Week

After three days' time of the general convention of the Sheet Metal Workers' International alliance had been consumed without the question of contested delegations being settled, it was agreed that a committee be appointed to arbitrate the matter. The report of the committee was returned after lunch Thursday and a report of the entire convention called to consider it.

An amicable agreement growing out of the committee's report is anticipated. In that case the executive session of the organization will commence upon its routine business Friday morning.

As there is five days' work on the calendar, according to the organization's officers, this will mean that the convention will not break up before Wednesday or Thursday of next week. On the last day of the convention officers will be elected.

EQUALIZATION BILL TO BE OFFERED SENATE

Provides for State Assessor and a Department of Tax Equalization

The finance committee of the state senate met Wednesday night and considered a tax equalization bill which will be submitted to the senate as a substitute for the Shepard substitute to the Lipscomb bill of the house.

The new bill was drawn by President Randolph Anderson and Senator B. S. Miller, chairman of the committee. It is said that the measure provides for county boards and for a state tax assessor, the latter to be appointed by the governor. He will serve for a term of six years, and his duties will be those of the state board, as provided in the Lipscomb bill.

The bill also provides that a state department of tax equalization be created, with offices in the capitol.

The Miller-Anderson bill will be printed, together with the house bill which it substitutes, and will be presented to the senate as soon as the committee can meet again and pass upon it definitely. There is a strong probability that the finance committee will favor the bill unanimously, and that it will receive the support of the majority of the senate members.

Whether the house will accept such a bill, or will amend it so as to exclude the state assessor feature, is a matter of speculation.

WASHINGTON, Ga., Aug. 7.—Mrs. T. J. Appleyard, of Tallahassee, Fla., wife of Florida's state printer, was stricken with paralysis Wednesday afternoon as she boarded a train for Atlanta, where she intended joining her daughters, who are at a house party.

No sooner had Mrs. Appleyard taken her seat in the train than she was stricken. She is reported as resting easier this morning.

FIRE IN PULLMAN FOUGHT BY PASSENGERS IN NIGHT

Burning Awning Cuts Off Sleepers From Other Cars, Fight in Night Dress

Passengers on a sleeping car attached to the Central of Georgia night train from Savannah were aroused from their slumber Wednesday morning at 4 o'clock by flames and smoke in the car.

As soon as aroused all ran for the vestibule, but were cut off by a flaming awning. To add to their plight they were completely disconnected from the rest of the train when the bell cord was burned.

Attired in their night dress, men and women worked side by side until they succeeded in extinguishing the flames. The fire is thought to have started from an awning catching fire. Except for the loss of sleep none of the passengers suffered.

Among those on board the car were Harry T. Hayes, city license inspector, returning from Boston, and Councilman Wood, who got aboard at Savannah.

KILLING IN AUGUSTA BY MILITIA TO BE PROBED

A legislative committe of seven will begin shortly an investigation into the killing of three Augusta citizens by the militia during the street car strike there last September.

The house committee on military affairs reported favorably Wednesday afternoon the Beck resolution calling for this investigation. The investigation carries an appropriation of $2,000.

It develops that at a hearing by the committee two weeks ago Mrs. Robert Christie, wife of one of the victims, Mrs. B. S. Dunbar, a sister of Mrs. Christie; Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Born, parents of another victim, and a Mrs. Baker, widow of the third victim, appeared and gave testimony.

Mrs. Dunbar, who comes of one of the most prominent families in Augusta, gave extremely important testimony that had never before been brought out. Her testimony gae in substance the ante-mortem statement of her brother-in-law, Robert Christie, who was shot.

Christie was on his way to Mrs. Dunbar's house when, she quotes him as haivng charged, he was shot. The first volley tore off one arm.

He was shot again, however, she went on, and died an hour or so later.

The resolution calling for an investigation was introduced two months ago by Representative Beck, of Carroll.

Under the procedure, the speaker will appoint five members and the president of the senate two on a committee of investigation.

The Perfect Baby Of The Future

A Simple Method That Has a Wonderful Influence upon The Future Infant.

Too much cannot be said for a wonderful remedy, familiar to many women as Mother's Friend.

It is more eloquent in its action than all the health rules ever laid down for the guidance of expectant mothers. It is an external application that spreads its influence upon all the cords, muscles, ligaments and tendons that nature calls into play; they expand without pain, without strain.

Mother's Friend must, therefore, be considered as a direct influence upon the character and disposition of the future generation. It is a conceded fact that, with nausea, pain, nervousness and dread banished, there is stored up such an abundance of healthy energy as to bring into being the highest ideals of those who fondly theorize on the rules that insure the coming of the perfect baby.

Mother's Friend can be had of any druggist at $1.00 a bottle. It is prepared by Bradfield Regulator Co., 239 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Write them for an instructive book to expectant mothers.

JUDGE ROAN DECIDES CONLEY'S TESTIMONY MUST STAND

Defense Asks Mistrial When Crowd in the Court Applauds Announcement of the Decision

Judge Roan, However, Refuses to Stop Trial—Dr. Harris on Stand During Afternoon and Again Asserts That Mary Phagan Suffered Violence Just Before Death—Dalton Called to Corroborate Conley But Court Adjourns Before He Testifies

Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the state board of health, was the first witness called for the Wednesday afternoon session after the jury was called into the room. The direct examination under Solicitor Dorsey was resumed.

Dr. Harris again asserted very positively that Mary Phagan had suffered violence of some kind immediately preceding her death, and explained in detail his reasons for reaching this conclusion.

The secretary of the state board of health was excused from the witness stand at 4:45 o'clock before his cross-examination had been finished. He was very weak, he said in response to the court's inquiry, and was permitted to stop his testimony, which was resumbed Thursday. Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, was the last witness examined before adjournment.

C. B. Dalton, mentioned by Conley, as having visited the factory in company with two women, was called just before court adjourned but did not testify.

Great excitement prevailed in the court room Wednesday afternoon when Judge L. S. Roan announced his decision to reverse himself on his ruling of Tuesday, striking parts of Conley's testimony. From the spectators' gallery the crowd cheered the decision, but quieted down after Attorney Arnold, for the defense, made a motion to clear the room. Judge Roan refused to clear the court of spectators but warned the spectators not to repeat the demonstration. Attorney Arnold then moved for a mistrial, in this he was also overruled by the judge.

Judge Roan, in his ruling, held that all of Conley's testimony would remain in the record of the case and that Solicitor Dorsey would be allowed to introduce witnesses to corroborate the negro's charges against Frank's conduct in his presence. As to having the Epps boy to testify as to what Mary Phagan told him regarding her fears of Frank, the judge held that inadmissible and the newsie will not be recalled.

When court reconvened at 2 o'clock, Solicitor Dorsey resumed his argument. The solicitor renewed his contention, citing authorities to back it up, that as a general rule failure to make objection to incompetent evidence at the time of introduction is a waiver of that right.

In this instance, said he, the court should hold that the defense had waived the right to object. In case of doubt as to the relevancy of evidence, said he, it should be left to the jury for that body to determine its weight.

The solicitor said that he cited several Georgia cases, among them some very old decisions. The solicitor stated that no fixed rule can be observed regarding the introduction of evidence of acts similar to the crime charged. The law says simply, says he, there must be some logical connection which will prove or tends to prove the other. It must be one of a system of mutually dependent crimes, said he.

"I intend to show," said he, "that this crime was one of a system of mutually dependent crimes."

The solicitor contended that he had the right to introduce evidence of transactions which serve to illustrate the state of mind of the defendant or his intention or purpose.

"The fact," he said, "that they are simply crimes does not make them inadmissible."

DORSEY QUOTES AUTHORITIES.

The solicitor asked if he should proceed with argument on his second proposition—involving his right to enter testimony corroborative of Conley—Judge Roan told him to proceed with that argument.

While the solicitor argued Attorney Rosser sat in the witness' chair, lolling back, with his legs crossed, rubbing his head.

Solicitor Dorsey emphasized the fact that he was quoting the laws and decisions of Georgia courts.

"We object, your honor, to the ruling out of this evidence which is already in and permeates the whole record, due to the direct and cross-examinations, and we want to introduce other evidence along the same line," said the solicitor.

Judge Roan asked what he expected to show by Dalton's testimony.

"I expect to show that what Conley has said about these things is true," said the solicitor.

"What do you expect to show by George Epps?" asked the judge.

"I expect to show by him that when little Mary Phagan left him at Marietta and Forsyth streets to go to her work at the factory, she told this boy she feared Frank because he had tried to flirt with her, and that she expressed apprehension concerning his attitude toward her.

SHAKES FINGER AT FRANK.

"This man," said the solicitor, shaking his finger in Frank's face across the table, "this man here with her superintendent. He shied her off, and she had expressed a fear of him. This is relevant and material evidence and we want to get it before the jury."

Solicitor Dorsey read a number of decisions, announcing after each one, "That's a Georgia decision;" and they were all in murder cases, and tended to sustain him in his contention that the evidence was admissible, and that after it had gotten into the records and been sealed there by cross-examination it could not be withdrawn.

He argued by these decisions that facts having a bearing on the case apparently might be disassociated from the crime itself, but still could be material to the charge.

Attorney Hooper took the floor.

"Your honor, I am always glad to obey your admonition and be brief in this argument. It is simply a question of law—the law of Georgia—and that is what controls this court; not the decisions of the supreme courts of California and Minnesota.

"With all of the authorities which we have here at hand, there is no necessity for argument. I would like to call your honor's attention to the rule and the law which govern this issue, and it is laid down here in the Code of Georgia, page 76, in plain Anglo-Saxon words." Mr. Hooper read it. It was of the effect that objections must be registered at the time testimony is offered.

Mr. Hooper made the further point that even if evidence was inadmissible at the time it was offered, the state has examined the witness on his testimony, and the defense has cross-examined him on it, and if it is ruled out now it only carries with it just what the negro related as to these incidents and not what was developed from him under direct and cross-examinations, which runs clear through the records.

Mr. Hooper called the court's attention to the fact that the testimony was necessary in order to explain what could not be explained without it—Conley's signals and answers at the factory that day. Mr. Hooper read from a number of law books. As he lifted each from the table he reiterated "This is a Georgia authority."

Continuing, Attorney Hooper declared that the testimony already introduced would explain the signals, and show what was meant by the stamping and the whistling.

Attorney Arnold concluded for the defense, citing authorities. He argued against the admissibility of the statement that Mary Phagan is said to have made to the Epps boy relative to going to the factory. After citing two authorities, he asked the judge if the court wanted to hear more. Judge Roan said no.

"Have you been asked Attorney Arnold what he had to say about the state's right to put Dalton on the witness stand.

"Well, I don't know what they expect to prove by him," said Attorney Arnold.

Solicitor Dorsey stated, "I tell you I expect to corroborate Conley's story."

Attorney Arnold cited an authority against the introduction of this evidence.

At the conclusion of this argument, Judge Roan announced he was ready to rule.

"I have thought about this thoroughly," he said, "and my mind is now made up. I doubt its admissibility as an original proposition, but it has been examined and cross-examined. It is impossible to withdraw it from the minds of the jurors. I could erase it from the records, but I am going to let it remain."

GREAT APPLAUSE.

A demonstration of applause broke out in court among the spectators. The deputy sheriffs immediately rapped for order and Attorney Arnold arose.

"I am going to make a motion to clear the room of the crowd," said he.

Judge Roan said: "If there is another demonstration of this kind I will order it cleared."

The excitement subsided, and the court room became normal again.

"Your honor, I ask for a mistrial," declared Mr. Arnold.

"Why, the jury wasn't in here," said the judge.

"They might have heard it anyway," continued Mr. Arnold.

"Well, I'm not going to stop this case," said Judge Roan. This was construed by the attorneys as a definite overruling of the motion.

Mr. Arnold stated privately a few moments later that he had made his motion for a mistrial under the misapprehension that the jury was in court. He had withdrawn the motion, he said.

RULES OUT EPPS BOY.

"I am going to do what I think is right in this case," said Judge Roan, "no matter whom it pleases or displeases. I hold that the additional testimony of the Epps boy is wholly inadmissible."

Attorney Rosser arose.

"I want to honor to say whether or not you admitted that Conley testimony because it was admissible," said he.

"For I am going to show line by line how it can be taken from the record. I will show you that it can be ruled out without affecting the record."

"Well, you can do that, Mr. Rosser, but I am not going to stop this trial now in order to let you do it," said Judge Roan. "You can do that at some other time. I am not going to let any of this argument get to the jury."

"Well, then your honor," said Mr. Rosser, "I just want to know if you are going to let the Conley testimony remain in the record."

"Yes, I am," said the judge.

"Now, your honor," said Mr. Rosser, "we object to the testimony of Dalton upon any subject or about any time except things that occurred on that particular day, April 26."

RULES ON DALTON.

"I will hold," said Judge Roan, "that the state shall have the right to corroborate Conley. I don't know what Dalton will testify, but it will be time enough then to discuss his testimony when he goes on the stand."

"Then there is no use for us to object. You are going to admit it," said Mr. Rosser.

"Yes, I purpose to let the state corroborate Conley's story. However, I cannot rule as to Dalton's testimony until he gets on the stand and I see what it is going to be."

DR. HARRIS RECALLED.

Judge Roan directed that the jury be brought in. Dr. Harris, secretary of the state board of health, to the stand. On account of Dr. Harris' illness, and consently because it was anticipated that he would be kept on the stand some time, the deputy sheriff brought in a big leather upholstered swivel chair, to make it comfortable for him.

Mr. Dorsey resumed his direct examination of Dr. Harris.

"What are your specialties in medicine," asked the solicitor.

"Pathology, diagnosis and chemical analysis."

DIED OF STRANGULATION.

"What indicated to your mind that this girl, Mary Phagan, died from strangulation?"

Dr. Harris treated the question as free from error. "Why, it was one of the question for that blow on the head to have caused it. There was but a drop of blood on the inside of the skull, and scarcely any pressure against the brain. Nothing else but the cord could have caused her death. The bluness of her hands and finger nails, and many other things, made it certain that she died from strangulation. The cord around her neck could not have caused these things had it been placed there after death."

"Doctor, did you examine the windpipe and the larynx?"

"Yes, I didn't completely remove them, as I didn't want to mutiliate the little girl. But I saw the whole windpipe, and there was no injury to it. In strangulation cases, injuries to the windpipe are rare."

"From the condition of her body, could you tell from what angle the cord was pulled?"

"No, sir," said the doctor.

"What about the lungs?"

"I didn't examine them very carefully, because you could tell but little about them on account of the nature of the embalming fluid used."

Dr. Harris explained that the embalming fluid's effect is only on the internal organs. It doesn't get into the skin, he said.

ASKS FOR BLOODY STICK.

The solicitor asked the defense to produce the bloody stick reputed to have been found by the agents in the factory.

"Could the wound on Mary Phagan's head have been caused by a blow from that stick?"

"I don't think it could," said Dr. Harris. "The blow must have been struck with an instrument with a sharper corner." Dr. Harris said. This was construed by the attorneys as a definite overruling of the motion.

Mr. Arnold stated privately a few moments later that he had made his motion for a mistrial under the misapprehension that the jury was in court. He had withdrawn the motion, he said.

RULES OUT EPPS BOY.

"I am going to do what I think is right in this case," said Judge Roan, "no matter whom it pleases or displeases. I hold that the additional testimony of the Epps boy is wholly inadmissible."

Attorney Rosser arose.

"I want to honor to say whether or not you admitted that Conley testimony because it was admissible," said he.

"For I am going to show line by line how it can be taken from the record. I will show you that it can be ruled out without affecting the record."

"Well, you can do that, Mr. Rosser, but I am not going to stop this trial now in order to let you do it," said Judge Roan. "You can do that at some other time. I am not going to let any of this argument get to the jury."

"Well, then your honor," said Mr. Rosser, "I just want to know if you are going to let the Conley testimony remain in the record."

"Yes, I am," said the judge.

"Now, your honor," said Mr. Rosser, "we object to the testimony of Dalton upon any subject or about any time except things that occurred on that particular day, April 26."

RULES ON DALTON.

"I will hold," said Judge Roan, "that the state shall have the right to corroborate Conley. I don't know what Dalton will testify, but it will be time enough then to discuss his testimony when he goes on the stand."

"Then there is no use for us to object. You are going to admit it," said Mr. Rosser.

"Yes, I purpose to let the state corroborate Conley's story. However, I cannot rule as to Dalton's testimony until he gets on the stand and I see what it is going to be."

Bridge Tea to Miss Harris

Miss Virginia Harrison was the attractive honor guest at the bridge tea at which Mrs. Spencer Atkinson was hostess this afternoon.

Mrs. Atkinson received her guests wearing a lovely gown of cream colored batiste hand embroidered and combined with lace.

Miss Harrison's becoming frock was shell pink batiste embroidered and lace trimmed and worn over a slip of rose colored charmeuse.

The card tables were placed in rooms vivid with summer flowers, tall vases of gladiola in all their flame and rose tints, asters, purple lavender and crimson fillea bowls and zinias with all their Japanese hues added to the glow of flower color.

Score was kept on cards hand painted with garden flowers in their natural colors, and the trophies in the game were an English print and a handkerchief.

Five o'clock tea followed the game, the table in the dining room having a lovely decoration in white and silver.

Silver candlesticks held white tapers under white shades covered with frames of silver filagree and all the sweets were in white. Silver vases of white asters were used on the buffet and mantle, the white flowers and green foliage making a refreshingly cool decoration in the lovely room.

Sisters to Take Charge Of Catholic School

On July 29 four Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament arrived in Atlanta from Philadelphia. They are members of the community founded by Miss Katherine Drexel, of Philadelphia, who has devoted herself, as well as her very large fortune, exclusively to the education of colored and Indian children.

The Sisters who came are Mother Aequinas, originally from Pittsburg; Sister Carmelita, from New York City; Sister Imalada, from Jamaica, and Sister Mildred, from Philadelphia. Their community has thirteen houses in the United States, teaching colored and Indian children in as many localities. Their order was founded in 1891, and this year (1913) Mother Katherine Drexel went in person to Rome and got from the Holy Father their approval of the rules of the community.

The Catholic school for colored children in Atlanta is at 103 North Boulevard. It was built by the Fathers of the African Missions, and opened in October, 1912. There were 100 pupils in the school last year, and during the past year the children were taught by colored lay teachers; but, from now on they will be taught by these Ladies of the Blessed Sacrament society—ladies who have left their homes and the comforts of home to help "preach the gospel to every creature."

On Friday, August 8, from 5 to 7 p. m. the Catholics of Atlanta will tender a welcome to the Sisters at their home, No. 103 North Boulevard. The people will have another chance of seeing the school and the church, and a first chance of visiting the convent itself. There will be benediction of the Blessed Sacrament at 6:45 in the church of Our Lady of Lourds.

THE USE OF RHINESTONES

Strings of rhinestones are used on tulle and lace bodices, giving an interesting line from shoulder to waist. This evening frock, of peacock green satin has a tulle tunic and bodice, both edged with rhinestones attached by invisible thread. The big black feather fan and the black plume in the hair reflect the vogue which plumes are gaining in Paris.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

THORNTON W. BURGESS.

(Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.)

Peter Rabbit was glad enough to get back to the dear old briar patch after his narrow escape from Old Man Coyote. Very deeply into Jimmy Skunk's old house half way up the hill, and little Mrs. Peter was glad enough to have him, you may be sure. She had been watching Peter when he so heedlessly almost ran into Old Man Coyote, and it had seemed to her as if her heart stopped beating until Peter reached the safety of that old house of Jimmy Skunk's just one jump ahead. Then she saw Old Man Coyote hide in the grass nearby and she was terribly, terribly afraid that Peter would be heedless again and come out thinking that Mr. Coyote had gone.

Poor little Mrs. Peter! She was so anxious that she couldn't sit still. No, sir, she just couldn't sit still. She felt that she just had to do something to warn Peter. She stole out from the dear old briar patch and half way to where Old Man Coyote was hiding. He was so busy watching the doorway of the old house where Peter was hiding that he didn't notice her at all. Little Mrs. Peter found a bunch of tall grass behind which she could sit up and still not be seen. So there she sat without moving for a long, long time, never once taking her eyes from Old Man Coyote and the doorway of the old house. By and by she saw Peter poke his nose out to see if the way was clear. Old Man Coyote saw him, too, and began to grin. It was a hungry, wicked looking grin and it made little Mrs. Peter very, very angry indeed.

She waited just a minute longer to make sure that Peter was where he could see her, and then she thumped the ground very hard, which, you know, is the way Rabbits signal to each other. Peter heard it right away and thumped back that he would stay right where he was, though right down in his heart Peter thought that little Mrs. Peter was just nervous and foolish, for he was sure that Old Man Coyote had given up and gone away long ago.

Now, of course, Old Man Coyote heard those thumps, and he knew just what they meant. He knew that he never, never could catch Peter so long as Mrs. Peter was watching him and ready to warn Peter. So he came out of his hiding place with an ugly snarl and sprang toward little Mrs. Peter just to frighten her. He laughed as he watched her run and all breathless, dive into the dear, safe old briar patch, and then he trotted away to his favorite napping place.

As soon as Peter was sure that he was safe he started for home, and there little Mrs. Peter scolded him soundly for being so heedless and thoughtless. Peter didn't have a word to say. For a long time he sat thinking and thinking, every once in a while scratching his head as a puzzled. Little Mrs. Peter noticed it.

"What's the matter with you, Peter? she asked, finally.

"I'm just studying what Old Man Coyote means by telling me one day that he is my friend, and proving it by doing me a good turn, and then trying to catch me the very next time he sees me. I don't understand it," said Peter, shaking his head.

"Oh, you dear old stupid!" replied little Mrs. Peter. "Now you listen to me. You did Old Man Coyote a good turn and he paid you back by doing you a good turn. That made you even, didn't it?"

Peter nodded.

"Well, then you are right back where you started from and Old Man Coyote doesn't see any reason why he should treat you any differently than at first, and I don't see why he should, either, when I come to think it over. I tell you what, Peter, the thing for you to do is to keep doing good turns to Old Man Coyote so that he will always be in debt to you. Then he will always be your friend."

As little rMs. Peter stopped speaking Peter sprang to his feet. "The very thing!" he cried. "It's a sort of golden rule, and I do believe it will work."

"Of course it will," replied little Mrs. Peter.

The house was beautifully decorated with sunflowers and yellow cannas, the flowers with their rich green foliage making an effective color scheme continued throughout the house.

Miss Norris received her guests wearing a gown of white marquisette embroidered in pink. Mrs. Fambrough's gown was white lace worn over pink. Miss Beattie wore a lovely gown of white crepe de chine, combined with princess lace, and Miss Fambrough's gown was black chiffon over white charmeuse, the corsage elaborately embroidered in coral.

Punch was served by Miss Lalah Tipton and Miss Winnie Isom from a flower bright table and others assisting in the entertainment of the guests were Mrs. A. L. Norris, Mrs. Eugene Jarrard, Mrs. J. C. Norris, Miss Marion Fambrough, Miss Irene Bennett, Miss Allie Perryman, Miss Edith Norris and Miss Alma Norris.

The table in the dining room, from which the sweets were served, had in the center a great basket filled with the lily-like golden cannas, yellow silk shades tipping the silver candlesticks and the minor details repeating the yellow of the lovely flowers.

About 150 guests were entertained, including the young married and unmarried friends of the two hosesses, Jesse McKee, other hosts to be Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Trenholm, Jr.

This evening Miss Norris will entertain the young women receiving with her at dinner, the party to be completed by Mr. Horace McHan, Mr. Robert Steele, Mr. Eckford Lumpkin, Mr. Ralph De Loach, Mr. Ivey, Mr. Charlie Donnell, Mr. Howard Stone, Mr. Harlan Branham and Mr. Yetters.

Miss Helen Taft and Mr. Charlie Taft are with former President and Mrs. Taft at their cottage at Murray Bay, Canada. Mr. Robert Taft is in Europe this summer. Mrs. John Astor will give a dance or some other large function at Beechwood late this month or early in September.

On Thursday she will assist her son, "Captain" Vincent Astor, entertaining guests aboard his steam yacht Noma, when he offers the Astor cups for the sailing yachts' competition of the New York Yacht club off Newport.

Mrs. Astor is having a delightful visit. She is present at all social affairs of note.

There is disappointment over the information that Mr. and Mrs. Henry Payne Whitney will not join the Newport colony, at least not until late in the season. They will leave this week on board the Imperator to go to Scotland for the grouse shooting.

J. P. Morgan went to the Olympic's pier Saturday afternoon to see his wife off for Europe. As sailing time came a steward had been beating for a long time an all-ashore tom-tom in the ears of Mr. Morgan, who could not make himself heard. At last he lost his patience.

"Say, how often do you have to do that? Can't you go to some other part of the ship?" he exclaimed, with the familiar vehemence that his late father sometimes displayed. He shook both hands up and down in his excitement.

The steward, who didn't know Mr. Morgan ,and that he was the owner of a big part of the Olympic, kept on banging his gong.

Mr Morgan summoned an assistant purser, who told the ear torturer to move on with his instrument.

Mrs. Morgan will spend two weeks in London, and then, with Mrs. J. P. Morgan, Sr., who is now in Europe, will go to Bad Nauheim for the cure.

It may be a coindicence, but Miss Gerry and Mrs. Ogden Mills usually have dogs to match their gowns, or perhaps gowns to correspond with their dogs. At all events, walking on Fifth avenue, as they do every morning during the season, when they take their constitutionals, they usually are attired in costumes that blend admirably with the coats of their little pets, who in stormy weather are carried under their arms and look like muffs.

Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the vice president, is one of the most indefatigable baseball fans in official Washington. She attends every game played here. She knows each of the players by sight, and often becomes so interested in the game that she adds her voice to the general shout when the Nationals score a run.

When the team is out of town Mrs. Marshall frequently may be seen in her automobile before some score board, watching the returns with breathless interest.

The Evening Story

The Last Rose

(Copyright, 1913, by W. Wergeland.)

Geraldine had had tea in the company of Mrs. Wreath, her housekeeper-companion, and dearest friend. They had lived together seventeen years and had arrived at the point where they felt themselves "talked out."

Geraldine felt this tonight as never before. Her whole soul cried out in protest against what was and longings for what was not. And she knew that it had been crying a long while.

He had not in turn set one in her chair.

She laid down the book she started to read after a while, found her lace shawl and, throwing it about her shoulders, went out of doors. There was a faint tang in the air, but it failed to invigorate her. She stood up on the steps and looked about with dull eyes.

What met her sight was as vague and cold as herself. The great yard sloped away from the worn, old house down to the road in neglect and confusion. Everything that had ever been growing there grew there still at its own sweet will. She went down the steps and through the yard. As she went all sorts of curious things caught detainingly at her dress and the floating fringes of her shawl. It was as if the old yard put forth a hundred hands to hold and keep her. But she went on, not noticing. Geraldine made her way to a bench and sat down upon it. She looked at the sky, which made a pink background for the old gray house. And she looked at the house itself. Above her the monster branches of a great tree swayed. She looked up at them, then back again along the wilderness of plants and shrubbery. And she shivered, though not from cold. "Barren—all barren," she thought.

A gleam of color caught her glance. She leaned forward, looking harder and believed, she thought, "there's a rose on that old bush. And I thought they had all vanished days ago."

The bush was not four feet away, yet she made her way to it with difficulty, so intricate was the tangle that interposed. And under the bush lay a yellowed sifting of fallen petals, but on the bush itself was a rose that had apparently just opened that morning, but was sweeter than all the other roses had been. It was the last.

Geraldine bent over it. "I will take it for myself. It is the last rose I shall have until next summer," she murmured.

With tender, careful fingers she broke the stem, scarcely jarring a petal. She lifted it to her face, walked back to the bench under the tree and sat down. The evening was growing very still. Nobody passed up the white road that curled townward. In the old gray house Mrs. Wreath was quietly intent upon affairs of her own. "The last rose of summer," thought Geraldine, dreamily. "I, too, am a last rose."

Her thoughts began to trail backward along the days of her own secluded life. The old gray house that seemed so vast now that she and Mrs. Wreath were alone in it had once been almost too small to house the gay crowd that filled it. There had been six of them—girls and boys, besides the father and mother and an aunt or two. Then there were always young friends coming and going. Lights in every room, music and chattering—how well she remembered it all! She had been as gay as the rest. She could dance as well, sing, hold her own with anybody when it came to repartee. One by one they had married and gone away—so far away! But Geraldine had scarcely realized what the departures meant, so absorbed was she in like happiness of her own. She had never dreamed that she would not marry as her sisters had done and have the same chance to win woman's normal destiny. Heth had said he loved her, but she overlooked that fact in loving him so much. Then came an evening when they sat on this same bench under the Norway pine together. The roses were out. She had placed one in his buttonole, but he had not in turn set one in her hair. He seemed absent minded and more silent than usual. At last he got up to go and held out his hand. "Good-by," he said. Giving her hand, she looked up at him, startled. "Good-by?" she repeated, blankly. He looked away from her. "Yes, good-by for a long, long time. I am going with my father to Russian tomorrow."

She had, of course, known that his father, a clever diplomat, was going to Russia, but she had never dreamed that Heth was going, too. Nothing had been said about or thought about that. Still he was going! Why? Because his father, perhaps he himself, had higher aims for him than wedding a poor country girl. She felt as if she had been struck a terrible blow, but she made herself smile and say casually, "I didn't know. Good-by, then, and good luck to you!"

She tried to hum an air carelessly as he went. Thrice she saw him turn as if to come back to her, but she made no sign. So he went on through the gate, which clanged fast after him in the high wall. She heard his horse gallop down the road toward town and every hoof fall beat misery into her heart. So he went and he never came back or wrote. She heard since that after his father's death Heth had succeeded to the post. Russia kept him. And she was alone.

Geraldine lived in the old house quietly, never going away, never receiving company, never finding a single day that was notalike all the others. One brother and one sister had died. The others were scattered far. They wrote to her infrequently. They never came to see her. "It's too far," they pleaded. She was forsaken.

There was very little to live upon, yet Mrs. Wreath made it do. They had a kitchen garden and they raised chickens. Sometimes Geraldine sold a little picture she had painted. Painting was her one asset and that of little account in the crude mill town. She was afraid to go into the world to learn anything new. She had been brought up to the life she was leading—the quiet, sheltered, home life of a timid, delicately born woman. She did not revel, but she hungered in her loneliness. She was indeed the last rose, and she was fading unseen in the midst of her fadeless memories.

Her love for Heth Douglas had been the one powerful element in her life, and though the passionate fire of it had burned down now from a scorching flame to an unvarying glow it still possessed her. She rose with her love in the morning and lay down with it at night. Sometimes she dreamed happy dreams of his returning, but more often she was tormented with that sudden, violent loss of him. Her daytimes were saner. She thought of him as she thought of her youth—a beautiful vanished thing that no wooing could win back to her. She had never blamed him. There had been something unworthy, some flaw in her, else she could have held him. Hers was the fault, not his. "He would have stayed if he had loved me enough," she believed. She hoped he was happy. Why should he not be?

He stooped low and kissed the rose.

With such thoughts as these Geraldine sat holding her rose and gazing upon it, while the waning light of the streets flowed over and around her and the Norway giant breathed wearily far above her.

"I, too, am a last rose," she wistfully sighed.

From a window of the house Mrs. Wreath's large serene face peered forth to see where she was. She withdrew and the curtains swayed back into place. Geraldine arose.

"I will take the rose in and give to Mrs. Wreath," she thought.

She had taken one step forward when she heard a sound that startled her—a sound infrequently heard on the lonely road beyond her walls—a motor was coming out from the town. She could not see it over the wall, but she waited to hear it go by with a rush. Even a chance motor varied the monotony.

But the motor did not pass. It took her only a moment to realize that it had stopped at her gate and by that time the gate had opened and somebody was entering. Geraldine knew who was entering instantly. She stood very still, with the fleecy white shawl draping her slender shape in the black gown, the little rose in her hands. Her fair head was held up, her face was still.

At the gate a man paused and looked at her—a long look. Then he came forward swiftly, sweeping the hat off his dark hair.

"My dear Geraldine!" he exclaimed.

He held out both his hands with a certain imperious eagerness, but Geraldine gave him one of hers. The other held fast to the rose. She looked into his eyes and thought she was dreaming.

"If you knew," he said, "how often I have pictured you standing here under the pine as you stood that night when I ran away because my ambition was greater than my love! I come back to find you under the pine, when my love has at last proved greater than my ambition. Geraldine, won't you give me both your hands? What are you keeping in the other?"

"The last rose of summer," she answered and smiled.

He looked down at the rose. "The rose you gave me that night when we parted is here above my heart," he said. "Such tribute I have paid you. I am not worthy of you dear. I am not worthy now. But I know I love you. I know the memory of you has hallowed my life. I have come to tell you so."

Geraldine waited a moment. Then she laid the little rose in his hand.

"It is yours," she faltered. "It bloomed for you."

Their eyes met. Then with wonderful, courtly reverence he stooped low and kissed the rose.

AMERICAN FASHIONS

By Lilian Young.

Pretty frock of shell pink mull with embroidered border design in white.

One of the nicest materials for summer frocks of the lingerie variety is mull, because it is extremely soft and can be had in pretty, delicate colorings. It launders well, too, and for these reasons comes back to us each summer as popular as ever. Mull with embroidered border designs is lovely for the dressy lingerie frock and in these borders one can find many most effective designs done either in solor or eyelet work.

The pretty mull dress here sketched is of shell pink coloring with a solid embroidered border done in white. The goods are cut so that the border forms a finish to the sleeve ends and edge of the tunic skirt. There are kimono sleeves to the blouse and a low rounded neck which is filled in with a yoke and small turned down collar of net. Either side of the blouse is gathered at the center front and held in place under a double fold of the dress material which is buttoned down with white enamel ball buttons. This same arrangement is repeated down the front of the skirt terminating at the knee under a flat pale blue messaline bow to match that of the girdle above.

The tunic skirt is evenly gathered at the waist, and from under its lower edge, two separate folds of the mull extend for several inches. These and the rounded neck of the dress are finished with a narrow strip cut from the border design.

The lower skirt is quite narrow and attached to some thin upper foundation part. It opens down the front with the edges rounded away above the feet.

ISSUED IN THE INTEREST OF THE SOUTHERN MERCHANTS CONVENTION

ROLAND ROWE, Editor — A Department of The Atlanta Journal — J. LOUIS CAMPBELL, Ass't. Editor

ATLANTA, GA., THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 7, 1913.

BIG CROWD HEARS ART OF BUYING AND SELLING DISCUSSED

Second Session Southern Merchants' Convention Presents Subject of Merchandising in Various Aspects

PATRONIZE HOME MARKET, SAY EMINENT SPEAKERS

Crowd Swells – Interest and Enthusiasm Increase–Friday Will End the Formal Program for First Week

The essential features of the art of merchandising constituted the central theme of Thursday morning's session of the Southern Merchants' convention. It was the second formal meeting of the great gathering. A majority of those who attended the opening session Tuesday morning were again in their places today and their number had been largely increased by the new arrivals who came Wednesday and Thursday morning.

Increased enthusiasm and greater interest were everywhere manifest Thursday morning when the delegates convened at Taft hall. Two days of rest and time spent in recreation and entertainment brought the convention members trooping to the auditorium with a spirit of zest and keen enjoyment for everything scheduled on the program.

W. W. Orr, whose subject was "Merchandising as a Career," was the first speaker.

"This is essentially the day of the great business man," said he. "We no longer look entirely to the great political leaders as our ideals, but look as much to the big business men.

"There was the day when the slogan of business was caveat emptor, but the one price system has done away with this.

"World's great prizes in future go to the business man."

Norman H. Johnson, editor of the Merchants' Journal and Commerce, in his speech advocated buying in the home market.

"Learn business in hard school of experience, theology, technical subjects at college," said he.

"There never was the necessity of thoroughly knowing your business that there is today.

"The best way you can build up the business of your town as a whole is by a well defined and constituted merchants' association.

"You must bring customers to you. Talk of the growth of the mail order houses. If you will write some of her letters to the farmers near you instead of sitting whittling on a dry goods box at your store you will come nearer holding the trade.

"The big mail order houses get the business because they go after it. You can get it if you go after it."

Mr. Johnson urged the southern merchants to stick more to home manufacturers and jobbers.

"Seventy per cent of the goods," he said, "that you buy in New York are made in the south.

"You have the opportunity today to find the very crux of merchandising. And what is this? It is buying small and often and making frequent turnovers."

He urged the merchants to study their business more, to buy more carefully and buy nothing they are not sure they can sell.

Mr. Johnson's remarks made a strong impression on the merchants and he was roundly applauded at the close.

W. P. Riley, of Evergreen, Ala., spoke next and urged the merchants to stand together for their interests as against the catalogue houses.

Paul T. Harber, editor of the Comerce Observer of Commerce, Ga., talked next on "Aggressive Advertising."

"From time immemorial," said he, 'there have been merchants stung by certain fake advertising propositions, usually programs, handbill schemes, etc. You often encourage these schemes while standing ready always is the best form of advertising for you, newspaper advertising.

"The advertising game,' said he, "is not one for a magician to play. Any of you merchants can write paying advertisements and you should do so."

J. H. McGee, a prominent merchant from Lawrenceville, Ga., spoke also on the subject of advertising, saying it is a necessity for the successful merchant and that he must advertise or go out of business.

He drew an illustration from his home town where the leading advertiser is the leading merchant and increasing his business at a rate of 40 per cent a year.

Following the speakers the subjects they had taken up were presented for general discussion.

Following the adjournment of the morning session of the convention, the delegates after luncheon gathered at the Equitable building for the car ride about the city. After the ride they will return late this afternoon for a general reception to be tendered them at the Piedmont Driving club.

A dray mule at Brown, Perryman & Greene Co., catching the spirit of bustle and activity around that place incident to the convention, ran away Wednesday and injured the drayman and doubtless would have done much damage had it not been for the quick work of Al Greene in coming to the rescue. Mr. Greene escaped with only a bruised hand, while the drawman is "laid up" with the injuries he received.

"It was especially busy time with us Wednesday morning," said H. S. Collingsworth, of the Grambling-Spalding company. "We had quite a number of the visiting buyers and we made some splendid sales."

LEADING DEALERS ARE LEADING ADVERTISERS, SAYS MERCHANT

J. H. McGEE,

Prominent retailer of Lawrenceville, Ga., who spoke to the merchants' convention Thursday morning on the subject of aggressive advertising.

MANY WOMEN VISITORS HERE FOR CONVENTION

There is quite a sprinkling of feminine visitors among those that are here for the merchants' convention.

The wives of many of the delegates are here with them to enjoy the entertainment features the program provides and also to render valuable assistance in the business transactions their husbands make at the jobbing houses by helping in the selection of dry goods, holiday goods and such things, where a woman's taste helps immensely.

And with the invasion of women into the business world it is not surprising to find a number of women here as delegates on their own account, successful as merchants and as such taking advantage of the convention's opportunity to keep up with the best thought of the leaders in southern mercantile affairs.

CONVENTION BUYING OPENS MUCH BETTER THAN LAST MEETING

At Some Houses Sales for the First Three Days This Year Are Greater Than for Entire Week Last Year

"BEST START YET," IS THE GENERAL OPINION

Volume of Business Is Reflection of Optimistic Tone Prevailing With Regard to Crops and Trade

Comparisons are always apt and one that is particularly so regarding the present gathering of merchants is the comparison by the jobbers of the buying being done by visiting delegates during the opening days of this convention and during the first days of previous similar occasions.

The best start yet is the common opinion. More goods sold in the first three days this year than for the entire first week heretofore is the record at some houses. At a number of other places the volume of business is well ahead of the same period for last year and those who do not claim an increase are finding the opening days well up to 1911 and 1912 records.

Promising conditions for this year's fall business are reflected strikingly in this start of the great market buying period in the Atlanta wholesaler's year. It shows the confidence of the merchants in the outlook. The large number of buyers also shows the increasing support to the Atlanta market coming from the rallying of southern merchants to the "buy at home" doctrine.

At the Rizzan-Malone company, to cite one instance, the list of visiting buyers which the house keeps each year during the convention already shows more names than the entire list for last year.

A. C. McHan, of John Silvey & Co., always conservative in his opinions, is enthusiastic over the start made at their company.

"Our sales due to the convention have exceeded our expectations," said C. B. Palmer, of M. Kutz & Co., wholesale millinery dealers. "We have had a number of visitors and have sold some very satisfactory bills."

Our sales for the first three days of the convention have far surpassed expectations," said C. J. Sullivan, of the M. C. Kiser company. "In fact, this is a bit late in our line, but we have had a big rush of business and have sold many opening bills."

"The visiting merchants are dropping in right along," said L. W. Brown, of Brown, Perryman & Greene company. "The convention is opening up better than last year."

DEALER QUITS EASTERN MARKETS FOR ATLANTA

Says He Can Find All the Goods He Wants Nearer Home

"I have been doing a good deal of my buying in eastern markets," said A. Corbitt, dry goods merchant of Willacoochee, Ga., "but since visiting Atlanta and becoming better acquainted with the market here, I see it's no use to go so far from home. Atlanta furnishes all the quality and variety I can find elsewhere and, besides, is nearer to me. I am delighted with my visit here and with the convention.'

"From talking with other merchants from all parts of the south, I find all of them feeling in an optmsitc frame of mind over the good crops that are everywhere in evidence and over the good fall business that will result.

"I expect to be here until Thursday night and am especially interested in the good speeches that are being made at this gathering. I consider that every merchant will be benefited who will attend the sessions and hear what successful leaders in all business lines have to say about the mercantile problems which we are meeting in our business day by day."

J. I. erry, one of the delegates, was called back to Donaldsonville suddenly by illness at his home. He had intended remaining here for the rest of the week.

C. D. Catledge, of Columbus, Ga., arrived Tuesday and wil remain through Thursday's session.

W. L. Darden, Jr., from Uvalda, Ga., was one of the merchants who showed his confidence in the Atlanta market yesterday by buying his entire bill of fall goods here.

CONVENTION ECHOES

Doings and Sayings of the Great Gathering

M. H. Hastin, of Brooks, Ga., was a visitor among the wholesalers Wednesday and stated that no one was enjoying the trip to Atlanta more than he.

Mr. Smith, buyer of Pearson, Phillips, Oxford Co., of Monticello, Ga., who has been in the hospital in Atlanta for some time, is able to be out this week in time to enjoy the convention festivities.

T. E. Moreland, a farmer-merchant of Dawson, Ga., is one of the big Atlanta boosters of the convention. He declares: "No eastern markets for us as long as I can get to Atlanta."

T. P. McCloud, merchant of Greenville, Ga., spent several hours among the wholesalers Wednesday. He believes in the Atlanta market and backed up his belief by purchasing his goods here.

Two merchants from Arlington, Ga., who are interested visitors to the convention are D. W. Sasser, Jr., and Mr. McNaire.

Mr. Carlisle, buyer of Swann & Carlisle, of Wedowee, Ala., is among the convention arrivals and expects to be here a number of days enjoying the festivities.

Mr. Bullard, buyer of Bullard Brothers, of Macon, Ga., was mingling with the wholesalers Wednesday. "Good crops in my section mean fine fall trade," states he.

Visitors at the M. C. Kiser company and buyers of Shield brand shoes Wednesday morning were Will Brown, of Brown & Brown, Aberdeen, Ga.; T. C. Miller, of Clearmont, Ga.; S. W. Hotens, of Smit, N. C.; Mr. Pittard, of Lowe, Pittard & Co., of Duluth, Ga.; L. M. Wells, of Ficklin, Ga.; J. F. Carter, of Alabama; Mr. Price, of Pitts, Ga., and Mr. Chambliss, of Cureton, Cole & Co., of Moreland, Ga., and Mr. Treadwell, of Treadwell & Sons.

Mr. Richardson, of the firm of S. C. Richardson, of Richland, Ga., has two reasons for being pleased. One is splendid wholesale market he finds here, and the other is the good outlook for fall business.

Among the visiting buyers at the McClure Ten-Cent company Wednesday were W. A. J. Bailey and son, of Langdale, Ala., and J. H. Pitts, of J. H. Pitts & Son, of Waverly Hall, Ga.

R. R. Ferrell, merchant of Dade City, Fla., was a convention visitor in the big city Wednesday. He recently sold out his business and rebought a much larger concern.

R. P. Freeze, of Freeze Brothers, of Henderson, N. C., and T. C. Richardson, of Elon, Ga., were visitors at the McClure Ten-Cent company Wednesday for the purpose of consulting E. P. Lewis, of that company, about adding 5 and 10-cent departments to their respective businesses.

R. T. Hamrick, of Fairmount, Ga., is a regular at all of the conventions. He has been here every year and does practically all of his buying in Atlanta.

E. F. Bolt, of Early, S. C., is one of the wise merchants who brought his wife to help him in making selection of his fall stock of dry goods. He will be here all this week.

One of the successful women merchants here during the convention is Mrs. M. Maroney, of Fountain Inn, S. C. She conducts a large general store and millinery establishment at that place and was among the first registered for the 1913 convention.

J. D. Price, from Pitts, Ga., spent a busy day Wednesday buying his fall stock in Atlanta.

J. F. Jenkins, the Florida traveler of Brown Perryman & Greene Co. found it a busy day Wednesday waiting on a number of his customers from his territory. "Crops are fine in Florida and everybody is expecting a great fall trade this year," said Mr. Jenkins. "Orange crop is splendid, cotton is good and corn the best ever." Mr. Jenkins gets into headquarters only about twice a year.

Among the travelers on the reception committee at the Brown Perryman & Greene Co. are L. S. Peterson, who covers south Georgia; C. R. Hubbard, who travels southeast Alabama; T. H. Martin, who travels southwest Alabama; W. A. Haley, who travels north Alabama, and J. "Friendless" Tate, who travels in north Georgia.

A. A. Barker, general merchant of Rutledge, Ga., reports that crops in his section are the best in several years. He looks for splendid fall trade.

S. N. Pitchford, from Walhalla, S. C., accompanied by his wife, is here for his first visit to the annual convention. He acknowledges he lost by missing the other two, but intends to miss no more in the future.

There are a number of druggists attending the convention and taking advantage of this time for the buying of their holiday goods for next Christmas.

A SYSTEM THAT FAILED

A Plan That Became a Dead Letter Because Its Would-Be Beneficiary Had Not the Courage to Apply It

Two brothers started a small printing office in Chicago. Both were practical men who had learned the business at the case and on the street.

The business, begun as it was in a period of financial depression, had but one chance to live. If the firm could turn out a comparatively large volume of work and make low prices on necessity printing, there was a fighting chance to get a foothold. Under these conditions the elder brother—who, proved to be a good mixer—would take the street for business at 8 a. m. and work faithfully till 5. Then he would go back to the shop and work until 10 at night. As his brother kept the same hours, the amount of work handled often was from three to five times what a workman and solicitor would normally turn out.

The firm gradually got more and more business, mainly on three scores. First, both of the men were good workmen and used good care in getting out jobs. Second, they produced the work on time. Third, their prices were actually and indisputably low—at a time when even the high-priced shops were slashing prices right and left in order to keep up payments on equipment bills.

The brothers knew several printers who had lost their jobs and who were willing, in order to get steady work, to put in almost as long hours as the proprietors. Two or three of these printers were added to the force and one of the strangest of anomalies in business might have been noted: A poorly-equipped printing office doing cut-rate work, yet cleaning up money in a panic.

With this start more machinery was purchased; in time the twelve by eighteen room grew to a floor; the pay roll at times threatened to touch the hundred men mark.

On the fifteenth anniversary of the founding of the business, the elder partner in a heart-to-heart talk announced to his brother, "Frank, do you know that we are not making any money?" Then he followed up the query with facts that he had long figured on, and which he himself had not believed until forced to do so by the realization that when he went to the business for money it was not to be had.

Under these circumstances, and as an outgrowth of the agitation among the employing printers' associations for cost finding, a comprehensive cost system, to replace the partial system then in use, was decided upon. A plant which is running at a loss after having made money, with equipment depreciating and proprietors approaching the time of life when ease makes its powerful appeal, is no joke. So the cost-finding system was turned to as a diagnosis, if not a panacea.

The system as installed was a combination of skilled accounting and common sense. There was not an excess of red tape, nor did the accounting add heavily to overhead. Unerringly the prime cost of every job was shown; overhead and selling cost added gave the point where profit began.

But the system did not work.

When a bunch of cost sheets came in and were figured, the brothers got together, and the same colloquy occurred. In going after that business in the future it would not be practicable to raise the price for that customer. The business would be lost—the customer driven away. Next time, perhaps, but not on that job.

Then was presented the spectacle of the management of a business knowing the exact cost, on estimates as well as on past work, and yet fearing to ask the prices called for by the cost sheet.

For three years succeeding the installation of this system—in accounting and cost-finding features one of the best ever designed—it has failed, because its findings are a dead letter. For, so long as a business loses, its system fails—Business.

TRAVELER CONTRASTS OLD TIMES AND NEW

Editor Firing Line:

If the traveling man is disposed at any time to complain of his lot and to get under the delusion that he is having a hard time, it would be helpful to him to hear the experiences of the veterans of the road, those who fought, bled and nearly died thirty years ago.

What vast changes have taken place in that time! Then traveling was a hardship. Now it is a luxury. Then the smaller towns had little or no hotel accommodations. The oil lamp was in vogue, and dark and dismal were the surroundings. Fly screens were not known, and the dining room was a place to dread. The bill of fare consisted largely of greens, grease and gloom. The joys of "set-back" were not known, and "solitaire" was not dreampt of. Then, too ,the roads were bad. Trains were few and teams poor.

Now we have frequent and fast trains, fine roads, automobiles and every convenience and luxury of travel.

In most of the small towns the hotels are good, with modern appliances and improved facilities.

In the cities the hotels are palaces. Kings and rulers do not fare much better than guests do in these modern hostelries.

To see the hundreds of travelers in one of these elegant, palatial establishments, one would suppose that they were built for multi-millionaires; and to observe the crowds of men luxuriating in all of this elegance, it is hard to realize that they are mostly drummers.

Very truly yours,

A. H. STEEDMAN.

Traveling Salesman for the J. D. Frazier Company.

NEW FLORIDA DELEGATE RESOLVES TO BUY HENCEFORTH IN ATLANTA

Claude Arrington, Brought to Convention by Fellow Merchant of His Home Town, Now Convinced Atlanta Is Place to Buy

He came, he saw and he was convinced.

This is in brief the story of one of the delegates to the Southern Merchants' convention and his visit to the Atlanta wholesale market.

Claude Arrington whose store is located in Florida on the lower edge of the Atlanta jobbers' territory, has heretofore been buying practically all of his goods from other markets.

It was through the solicitation of another merchant of his town that he accepted Atlanta's invitation to come as a delegate and it was especially to see the showing of merchandise offered the retailers by Atlanta houses that he was urged to come by his brother merchant, who was already an "Atlanta buyer."

Now he has seen what Atlanta concerns offer. He looked the displays over carefully. Result—he, too, is now an "Atlanta buyer."

"I am immensely pleased over the line of goods to be found here in Atlanta and am already convinced it is to my interest to buy here," says Mr. Arrington. "I had heard much of Atlanta as a wholesale center, but have known practically nothing of its first hand before this visit. You can put me among the Atlanta boosters."

This and other similar cases illustrate one of the valuable aids of the convention in building up Atlanta's wholesale market—the bringing of new customers.

The S. P. Richards company is just now sending out to the trade their big new catalogue, on which H. M. Kopplin, of that firm, has been busy several months. It is a splendid piece of work containing 240 pages, adequately displaying in picture and description the big Richards stock of stationery, blank books, school supplies and druggists sundries. The company sells to dealers only.

Market in New York Closed 7 Points Off to 5 Up From the Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Continued nervousness, due to rains in the southwest caused a scramble of cotton buying at the opening. First prices were 5 to 9 points higher. Realizing sales soon slightly disappointing, but the forecast was fair weather for both Texas and Oklahoma and several months sold about 6 to 10 points higher during the early trading.

Private predictions of cooler weather and showers for the southwest checked the early buying movement and the offering of cotton for long account in the morning under realizing or southern selling with prices a point or two net lower at midday.

The market was quiet during the afternoon with prices sagging off under scattered realizing for liquidation and with new crop positions selling about 5 to 9 points net lower. August was relatively steady, holding 4 or 5 points higher in the absence of sellers.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 7.—Cotton futures opened steady, unchanged to 2 points up compared with the close of yesterday. Cables were lower than due but had no effect on the market in view of the continued drouth and high temperatures in the southwest. Shortly after the opening attention to buy covers on the weather outlook and a moderate demand from local long buying were in evidence. Offerings were small.

At the end of the first half hour of business prices were 3 to 6 points over yesterday's last quotations, the distant months showing the wildest advance.

Toward the middle of the morning private reports of rain in Oklahoma and Texas together with private forecasts of more rain for the southwest. There had also been a immediate effect on prices although bulls pointed out that they were entirely unofficial. Prices for distant months broke 10 to 12 points and went 5 to 7 points under the last quotations of yesterday and would have moved lower but for and reaction from several points in Texas and Oklahoma stating that no rain had fallen and that the drouth was becoming more and more serious. At noon the market was very steady with prices about 5 points below the highest of the morning.

At the end of the first hour of business prices were 3 to 6 points over yesterday's last quotations, the distant months showing the wildest advance.

Toward the middle of the morning private reports of rain in Oklahoma and Texas together with private forecasts of more rain for the southwest. There had also been a immediate effect on prices although bulls pointed out that they were entirely unofficial. Prices for distant months broke 10 to 12 points and went 5 to 7 points under the last quotations of yesterday and would have moved lower but for and reaction from several points in Texas and Oklahoma stating that no rain had fallen and that the drouth was becoming more and more serious. At noon the market was very steady with prices about 5 points below the highest of the morning.

NEW YORK COTTON LETTER

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The market sold off during the morning on private predictions of local rains in the west with a bit of a disturbance in the gulf, but steadied up at noon on the detailed weather report which showed temperatures ranging from 90 to 107, and no rain. Arkansas showed 18 points, with 106 to 107 rain. Oklahoma showed 17 points, 100 to 107, no rain. The temperatures were not as high in Texas, but on belt was very little rain was shown. These high temperatures are causing uneasiness among the leaf foreign buyers and are a bullish factor of note.

Some of the spot interests are among the leading buyers today, while Wall street uptown reved and local operators are credited with good rains fail to materialize in the western belt between now and Sunday we may expect a further rally. On the other hand sentiment continues bearish and any precipitation over the belt will result in heavy selling. It is purely a weather market just now, and is influenced easily either way on any news of this nature.—Anderson.

GEORGIANS WIN PRIZE AT COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

At the meeting of the Southern Association of Students of Columbia university last week Georgia students carried off the first prize offered by the association for the most skillful performance of a production which represented a noted feature of the state.

The successful feat was a dance performed by six young ladies from Georgia, in reproduction of Sidney Lanier's poem, "The Song of the Chattahoochee." So charmingly and gracefully was this unique idea executed that the triumph was complete.

In the three years of this association's history in which prizes have been offered Georgia has won three first prizes and one second trophy. This year Georgia has over 100 students attending the summer session of Columbia.

INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advices, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

COTTON GOSSIP

Times-Democrat says: According to the bears yesterday's advance from a revival of last week's price boom, which week-end rains had interfered with, was overdone. The bull talent has begun to realize the danger of selling short because of the continued absence of rain in the west, also because of the approach of a shower belt to the Clarke and Smith hills, affecting cotton contract trading.

Meanwhile, the market is very narrow, and as light crops are coming in selling orders seem to move values a little way. Damage reports are beginning to come in from the west in sufficient number to cause some concern and the gulf storm, which big yield men now depend upon to stem the tide of precipitation above formation and may not form at all. Dry gulf coast weather would be very bearish for cover.

Yesterday's exporters and forward sellers received some inquiries from Europe for supplies, but very little business was reported done.

Map fair early in the day except locally central gulf disturbance. No rain except light showers central gulf district and along Atlantic coast. Temperatures normal, except in parts of Arkansas and Tennessee, where they were above normal. Indications are for unsettled showers, gulf coast districts, increasing cloudiness with increased prospects of precipitation above cooler in north Texas, Oklahoma and parts of Arkansas. Local showers and cooler rains in west and developments likely to culminate over Sunday.—Kofler.

Forecast—Louisiana: Tonight and Friday generally fair, except scattered showers in southeast portion tonight and Friday; light to easterly to southerly winds on the coast.

Arkansas: Fair tonight and Friday, continued cooler.

Oklahoma and West Texas: Tonight and Friday generally fair.

East Texas: Tonight and Friday generally fair, light southerly winds on the coast.

Georgia: Fair tonight and Friday.

Alabama: Fair except showers in extreme south portion.

Kentucky: Thunderstorms tonight; Friday, warmer.

Tennessee: Fair tonight and probably Friday.

Mississippi: Fair, except extreme south portion tonight or Friday.

At 8 a. m. bids in New York were as follows: January 11.01, March 11.02, May 11.07, July 11.04, October 11.15, December 11.18.

By 9 a. m. bids in New Orleans were: January 11.18, March 11.28, August 11.45, October 11.20, December 11.03.

Montgomery, Dick Bros., Mitchell and Wilson of the bears: Weld said to be buying cotton for sale. Weld said to be a leading buyer. Cotton was bought also buying.

Map complete absence of rain lower but for continued unsettled weather, cooler coming on Texas and Oklahoma within the next 24 hours.—Kofler.

Liverpool cables: "Small market with poor undertone, better spot demand."

Memphis, Tenn.: At present time and Oklahoma is dry and hot. This put market up early, but expect this bull news able to offset any or other disturbance somewhere and on their assurance of rain we look for future prices to declined a few points. It is dull, and prices reflect that wait and see attitude, however, present high temperatures, with rain and with favorable development will take place in southwest, but if favorable weather will be entirely different. Eastern belt reports are brilliant.—Clark & Crump.

General selling by ring crowd on fear rains in western belt, but rains fail to materialize by local weather experts. Crowd bought on noon weather, seeing no rain and now depressing market.

All points, seventeen in number in Oklahoma show temperatures 100 to 107; no rain.

Government records show temperature average Oklahoma 104 and Texas 100 degrees, five stations reporting.

GRAIN GOSSIP

Chicago Inter-Ocean says: Sentiment in wheet has been quite bearish for the last week, based on the big receipts and light export business. Shrewd operators, however, only selling on bulges, and say that cattle should be used as long as the bull movement in corn continues. While a majority of corn traders are bullish, there are a number who are afraid to follow the bull movement further, because rains are unprecedentedly high for this season and December and May corn are a good deal of spreading between corn and wheat, the latter being sold and corn bought on the carrying charge theory.

Bartlett, Frazer & Co. say: Wheat.—Weather in western Europe generally favorable. Parts cloudy conditions prevail in the northwest this morning with light rains reported at a number of points in both North and South Dakota. The market shows a rather steady tone and there seems to be more friendly sentiment in wheat around these prices.

Corn.—According to reports thus far receive there have been some light showers in parts or Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and Missouri, but with temperatures running slightly lower. We look for a somewhat more bullish tone to general rains occur do not expect any lasting decline.

Oats.—There seems to be more commission house buying but local professionals work on the short side of the market. Receipts are of fair volume though offerings of the new crop are moderate.

Provisions.—There was fair realizing on the advance yesterday but the buying was of a good character. Packers bought October ribs. Cash trade was fair with shipments of lard larger than those of last year.

Bartlett selling December wheat.

Jenks buying September wheat.

Commission house have been scattered buyers of September wheat around present prices.

Selling has been quite general in corn. Harris, Winthrop, Bach, Sickinger and Rankin sold rather freely. Commission house bought.

Estimated receipts tomorrow:

Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, probably showers tonight or Friday.

Missouri, fair in south; probably showers north portion tonight or Friday.

Dakotas, Kansas, fair tonight and Friday, warmer.

Nebraska, cloudy, cooler.

The selling in corn has been quite general. Commission houses buying.

Talpitzki says: corn going back every day. Already damaged 50 per cent. Unless rain within a week or ten days will mean big loss.

Michigan reports August corn condition at 87; early Sept las, August 27 when crop was 52,000,000 Wheat yield per acre 15 bushels; July 14½, last year 11. Crop condition 100.00; quality good. Plowing done for wheat 15 per cent. Oat yield 29.2 bushels, year ago 31. Rye yield per acre 13.62, July 13.8, last August 12.

King, of Toledo, makes Ohio August wheat 101 per cent; July 94; last August 40; July government report 89.

Corn condition per cent; July 81; last August 105. They figure 15 bushels per acre for wheat and 30 for oats as per.

No corn reports.

Chicago—Armour selling wheat. The advance in provisions was on buying by Logan, of September ribs and Cudahy buying lard. Selling scattered.

I am inclined to think wheat around present level is low enough, but not sure will demand or the size of the movement of spring wheat to market.—Rycroft.

CORRESPONDENT OPINIONS

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to advise caution as to short sales around the eleven cent level.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Spinners have not become anxious as yet.

Miller & Co.: Everything depends upon cotton conditions in the southwest.

Logan & Bryan: We believe that it may be well not to press the selling side too closely, for, as intimated in our advices to today, shorts displayed some nervousness and were disposed to reduce lines pending further developments in the western belt.

Union Pacific, Reading, Steel, Illinois Central, Car Foundry and Copper Led

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—A number of moderate advances were recorded in the early dealings on the stock exchange today. Prominent issues, with the exception of Canadian Pacific, were up about a quarter to a half point, while Delaware, Lackawana & Western gained 5. Trading was dull and of small volume.

Realizing and new short selling met the initial advance and some gains were almost effaced by the end of the first hour. Union Pacific and Great Northern preferred were strongest in the high grade issues, but the market as a whole relapsed into dullness.

Trading became more animated at noon, steel making a new high price for seven months. Southern Pacific, Baltimore and Ohio, Atlantic Coast Line and Reading were more active. Union Pacific rose 1¼ and the preferred ½. Weakness in specialties included a 9 point drop in Studebaker.

Manipulation was evident in early dealings on the curb exchange. Opening quotations, which showed general gains on the more favorable European situation, gave way to profit-taking sales and declines were quickly extended to new backs. Union Pacific was again the leader, rising another point on further reports of today's close, while Reading, Steel, Amalgamated and Smelting were equally prominent. Changes in the more obscure issues were no less confusing with two to three points declines in American Tobacco and American Snuff. Texas company gained 3 points.

Bonds steady.

Gains of the early afternoon were fairly well sustained, but trading slackened as the session drew to a close. Bonds were steady, with buying to cover short contracts on news from the middle west and were mainly fractional gains and the further decline in prices of food stuffs.

The market became increasingly dull in the final hour with moderate decessions from best prices of the afternoon. Traders, however, retained most of their advantage.

Closed strong.

Polo Gets Trial in Atlanta--Crackers Broke Even in Opener

Distance Race At Motordrome Friday Night

Race for 25 Miles Between All Ten Riders Will Give Fandom a Chance to See Some Real Excitement

The Marathon and thirty-minute motor races recently held at the Motordrome proved just about as exciting as any fan could wish, but they are not a circumstance to the big twenty-five mile event carded as the big feature for Friday evening. All ten riders at the track will be in the event and with all going around at quite a lively clip there will be plenty of cause for enthusiasm.

Besides the big twenty-five mile feature, which is the biggest atraction yet offered the fans, there will be several other big features including an invitation race which is open to all comers. This will probably be entered by some five or six of the very best racers and the competition will be keen, each being out to show up the other.

Nine events are booked for the night, this including two big match races in which all riders will participate, a special invitation race, a match between two of the crack riders and the big twenty-five mile event.

Here is the program in full:

FIRST EVENT.

Motordrome Purse (qualifying heats, one mile; final, two miles; winners of trial heats and second man in fastest heat to qualify)—First heat, Richards, Lockner, Graves.

SECOND EVENT.

Motordrome Purse—Second heat. Glenn, Renel, Swartz.

THIRD EVENT.

Motordrom Purse—Third heat, McNeil, Lewis, Luther, Shields.

FOURTH EVENT.

Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Lockner. (Two-mile heats, two best in three.)

FIFTH EVENT.

Motordrome Purse—Final heat.

SIXTH EVENT.

Invitation Race—Distance, five miles. Open to all comers.

SEVENTH EVENT.

Special Match Race—Glenn vs. Lockner.

EIGHTH EVENT.

Special Match Race—Third heat, if necessary.

NINTH EVENT.

Twenty-five-mile Race for Championship of the South—Graves, Swartz, Shields, Lockner, Richards, Luther, Renel, McNeil, Lewis, Glenn.

Coast Stars Win at Tennis

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—California earned a monopoly of honors in the national tennis doubles Wednesday. By a well deserved victory over the eastern champions, Clarence Griffin and John Strachan, the Pacific coast's clever pair won the right to meet Bundy and McLoughlin, their fellow-Californians, for the champion ship of the United States at Newport, August 18. The eastern team, Gustav Touchard and Watson M. Washburne, although outplayed and outgeneraled, owes its defeat chiefly to a lack of team work.

The California youths who have played together since childhood, played as one man and won in straight sets, 6-1, 8-6, 6-4.

Of the eastern pair Touchard played the better game. He lent active support at times to Washburne, but the latter, who was made the target for his opponents' attack, had more than he was able to take care of, and was worn down by it.

Playing every possible point against Washburne, the western team wore him down and broke through his serve for the first time in the thirteenth game of the second set. A double fault helped them and the next point, a typical one point when he weakly returned into the net a drive of Strachan's which almost took him off his feet.

The east made its best showing of the day in the third set, Strachan, whose service is a duplicate of McLoughlin's and was a feature all day, kept up his fine work in its final set.

Johnson Now After Record

The Swedish wonder of the American league has now tied a record, and peculiarly enough this record is held by his teammate "Lefty" Boehling. Both of these hurlers have won eleven straight games, thereby passing the record set earlier in the season by Cy Falkenburg, the come-back marvel, who won ten straights.

Johnson's victory over Chicago on Wednesday completed the unbroken string of eleven. He allowed only three hits and two runs while his teammates piled up a total of eleven.

And yet with all this hurling stuff exhibited by Boehling and Johnson, the Senators do not seem to break into the stride of the fast flying Naps and Athletics.

Appealed to President

ANNISTON, Ala., Aug. 7.—President M. R. Meadows, of the Opelika club of the Georgia-Alabama league went to Gadsden from this city Tuesday afternoon to confer with league President W. J. Boykin, in an effort to get reinstated, Manager Ragsdale, Pitcher Williams and Catcher Bone, who were suspended for an attack on Umpire Welch during the game here Monday. Annistonians hope to see him successful.

ATLANTA FANDOM WITNESSED POLO GAME AT M'PHERSON

Instead of the scheduled eight-man match, the polo game at Fort McPherson was pulled off between two two-men teams and ten minutes of polo were furnished to the throng of spectators who congregated at the fort to witness the polo contest and the military games.

Automobiles lined the parade grounds, and the sponsors were there in a big tallyho, as good looking a sthey make 'em, and the society of Atlanta was there in full force.

For a beginning thy match was good, and better things may possibly be expected of polo in the future.

Besides the polo match the wrestling on horseback was intensely exciting, and especially the match between Privates Fergue and Flynn.

The music furnished by the Seventeenth regiment's band also furnished an enjoyable feature of the afternoon's program.

Teams Bunched In Warm Fight

Three Clubs Have Chance to Get Away With Pennant in Appalachian

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 7.—The pennant race for the last half of the season in the Appalachian league has, seemingly, narrowed down to three teams—Knoxville, Johnson City and Morristown. The pennant for the first half was won by Johnson City, with Knoxville finishing second. If any other team than Johnson City wins the flag for the second half of the season, a seven-game series will be played between the winner for the first half and the winner of the second half to decide the pennant winner for the season.

After going through a rather erratic and jagged season the Knoxville outfit has finally rounded into form and is winning regularly just now. This is because four twirlers now working for the local team are doing exceptionally fine work. They are Lawrence, Scheffley, McCrary and Merritt. Lawrence has hung up a remarkable record for the season by winning twenty-one games out of twenty-five pitched. He is one of the most finished twirlers seen in a Knoxville uniform since Frank Davis was sold to Cincinnati last season.

An outfielder in the Appalachian this season who is attracting considerable attention is "Big Jawn" Cochran, of Rome. Cochran holds the record for the longest hits in nearly every park in the Appalachian league. His home runs to date number twelve. He is a left-handed hitter. He played with Knoxville last season, was drafted by Birmingham and released to Rome in the spring.

CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

Again the league leaders were idle and again Birmingham. This puts the Crackers and Barons on equal footing for third place.

Mathewson went badly on Wednesday, and the Pirates took one from the Giants, the Phillies, however, won one.

The Athletics put one over on Cleveland when they got next to Gregg. The Senators walked away with them.

TICKETS FOR BOXING BOUT

As the time for the boxing bout which is to open Lou Castro's club draws near all arrangements are being rapidly completed. The fighters report from their respective camps that they will be on hand. Frank Whitney arrives in Atlanta on Friday and will then go into training. Charley White, his protagonist, arrives on the following morning. This will give both fighters four days in atlanta.

From the interest shown in this fight it seems the public is alive to the fact that they are going to be presented with a real boxing card, and are going to see some real fighting.

We are the harborers of a particular hunch that if this bout is appreciated sufficiently by the fans, Atlanta will continue to be the meeting place of good fighters, members of the lightweight class who want to get there and will put up a good fight to do it.

If not, boxing will doubtless go on the downward grade again.

Tickets for the bout were placed on sale on Thursday. Prices, $1, $1.50 and $2.

Outfield Job For E. Walsh

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Ed Walsh, star pitcher of the Chicago American league club, whose arm has been sore since spring and who has taken part in but few games this season, left today to visit a specialist at Youngstown, Ohio, where he will undergo an examination to ascertain whether his career as a twirler is at an end. His appearance with the White Sox was in Chicago July 19, when he was obliged to retire after pitching two innings against the Philadelphia Athletics. He declared that if he finds himself unable to pitch again he will make an effort to become an outfielder.

Record Sale In This Game

Business Men of Nashville in Charge of Cracker-Vol Battle

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 7.—Eight thousand advanced sales have been made for admission into the first Atlanta-Nashville contest which will be played under the auspices of the Business Men's association. The local business men have gotten busy and whooped the game up until half of Nashville will be at the park this afternoon. The weather is fair.

Williams, Nashville's premier slab artist, has been saved up for this occasion and will oppose the Crackers. Gibson will be his battery mate.

For the Crackers, Smith will probably use one of his southpaws, Love or Clark, to oppose Williams, while Dunn will probably do the receiving.

Tennessee Crack Now in Atlanta

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. Aug. 7.—John M. Allen, Jr., of this city, southern checker champion, who is defending his title in Atlanta this week, is also a tennis player of no mean ability. In the recent state championship tournament in this city he fought him himself through to the finals, only to suffer defeat at the hands of R. Y. Smith, of Nashville. Smith was later defeated in the championship match by Carlton Y. Smith, of Atlanta.

Allen is one of the best known young men of this city, and his Knoxville friends are pulling for him to win another checker championship even though he was defeated at tennis.

Half and Half In Two Games With Lookouts

Timely Rapping by Smith, Bisland and Holland Aided in Getting Away Even — Dent Proved Big Help

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 7.—An even break of the double and an even break of the series was the best either team could do on Wednesday afternoon. The scores were Atlanta 2-5, Chattanooga 4-4.

The games were rather slow, but were closely fought.

Flick's homer in the first and Graham's triple in the second were the heavy hits for the locals while Chapman in the first, and Smith, Bisland and Holland in both, were busy with the willow.

The Crackers could not do much with Kroh in the rst game, while the Lookouts got next to Conzelman in the fourth and fifth, scoring twice in each round.

In the second Gil Price had the Lookies buffaloed until the seventh when they pushed one across. In the eighth, after three had scored, Price was retired and Dent sent in. He fanned one in the eighth and held out in the ninth.

The second inning of the second game was when the Crackers did the big part of their day's work. Five successive singles gotten off Grimes' delivery netted three tallies.

In the first game Chattanooga pulled two fast double plays, both of which came when Atlanta had three runners on and one down. Joe Dunn was the batsman on both occasions.

Crack Hitters Badly Needed For Crackers

Possible That Jud Daley Will Be Picked Up Yet There Is a Youngster Who Will Get the Preference

In a last desperate effort to strengthen the team and be ready for the big drives upon the long home stay another outfielder may be landed by the Crackers. Manager Smith is out for a hard hitting youngster and he may be landed at any moment.

Right now Holtz is playing right field in fair style, but his weakness against left-handed twirlers makes him of no use in many of the games. This weakness has caused Manager Smith to go out for another outfielder and from rumors the man may be Jud Daley, that popular comedian now with the Nashville club.

The Vols have not released Daley yet it probable that such will be done shortly and when the move is made he will be grabbed by the Crackers, maybe. It is not certain by any means; for it is equally as probable that another youngster will be picked up. Manager Smith would much prefer to take on a youngster who would be of service next season and plans are now out to make this move.

Harry Holland at third has stuck with the veterans in all departments of the game and the team right now is no weaker than some weeks ago so far as the infield is concerned. Harry has begun to hit the ball and his fielding has been up to the standard.

Journal Team Has a Lead

The Journal team of the Grocers' league annexed their sixth straight game Wednesday afternoon when they defeated the L. W. Rogers Grocery company at Marist college diamond in an exciting game by the score of 12 to 6.

Although strengthened by several new men, Rogers was unable to stop the fast Journal team.

The feature of the game was the catching and pegging of McGee, of The Journal, he catching a number of would-be stealers, and not a stolen base was recorded on him.

Johnson, of The Journal, also featured with his good pitching. Hull, Pavlosky, McGee, of The Journal, and Farr, of the Rogers team, starred with the willow.

Justice Hall Dead

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 7.—Justice Samuel P. Hall, of the California court of appeals, died suddenly during a dinner at the home of his sister, Mrs. A. Moore, in this city last night. His sudden death is thought to have been caused by the excessive heat yesterday.

One daughter of the late justice is Mrs. Anthony Caminetti, Jr., wife of a son of the United States commissioner general of immigration.

BUNTS AND BINGLES
BY JULIAN MURPHEY

Two months ago it was believed that the Philadelphia club would have a most easy time taking the American league pennant, while the New York Giants would find it most hard to keep out in front in the National league battle. Right now it is just the opposite. The Mackmen have begun to hit the rocks while the Giants are just running away.

PITCHING MAIN ASSET.

Pitching is proving the main factor in both races—all of which goes to prove the recent contention that hurling is about 40 per cent of the game with the remaining 60 divided among the many other departments of play. In the American league the lack of real, dependable pitchers is preventing Connie Mack from making the affair a runaway, and in the National a couple of hurling corps has allowed the Giants to climb to first place and led clubs which with the exception of the hurling end are their superiors. Mack's twirling staff is a combination of wornout veterans and undeveloped youngsters, while John McGraw has an outlay of flingers who are just beginning to learn the pitching game.

Bender and Plank are the mainstays of the Mack staff, and they have been around so long that they have lmost outlived their usefulness and can't stand the strain of a real hard campaign. Though both Bender and Plank are growing old they have to bear the brunt of the pitching burden and it is beginning to tell on them.

To help out his two veterans Mack has several young hurlers who are serving their first season in the big show. They all look like promising hurlers but are not ripe. They are learning rapidly and give promise of being stars in their day, but their day has yet to arrive.

Outside of the hurling corps everything else with Mack is of the championship calibre. In Schang, Lapp and Thomas he has three catchers the peer of anything else in the league, while his infield is probably the best ever gathered on the same club. And the outfield is no slouch, But when the hurlers don't deliver the team won't look like a wonder.

M'GRAW'S HURLING STAFF.

In Marquard, Tesreau and Demaree the Giant club has three twirlers who have just reached their prime. They are ripe. And to assist this trio is Mathewson, the most remarkable of the older hurlers. And these four hurlers are carrying the Giants right along to a pennant.

At the hurling department the Giant club is far superior to any club in the National league, but *at other ends of the game there are sev*eral National teams that have it all over the McGraw club. But hurling counts for so much that the Giants enjoy the edge and right now are out in front. And this same crack hurling staff is sure to make McGraw the favorite in the world's series.

GOOD COACHING ESSENTIAL.

Of late the Atlanta club has given up all its pep and the coaching is beginning to fall off. This will never do if a high finish is to be made, and the sooner a change for the better is made in these two departments the earlier the club will begin to climb. Good coaching is necessary while a lot of pep and ginger is a big help.

Many are the games that are lost through poor coaching of the baserunner. Often comes the time to win a game and the coacher must know exactly what to do with the runner. He must know when to hold him and when to send him up a base. It may be the turning point in a good, close game. The runner can't watch ball, base line and the baseman all at the same time and this necessitates that the coach be of the wide-awake class who watches every move in the game. In the next game it wouldn't be bad to get the very best men on the base lines. It may win a ball game. Anyway it will please the fans.

THE SPORTLIGHT
BY GRANTLAND RICE

Johnny Evers needs no Delphic oracle to forecast his managerial future. He knows what happened to another who was good enough to win four flags. It's merely a matter of when—not why.

Another freak play has attached itself to the season's list. There are two out with the bases full of Phillies. The fourth ball to the next batter up is a wild pitch. The runner on third ambles home, of course, but the runner on second overruns third and is tagged out before the runner from third has scored. There is only one answer. The run counts, as each man on was entitled to the next base when the batsman was awarded the fourth ball.

The Athletics are again reported to be cracking. The report probably means cracking the ball. They have given signs of skidding several times this season, but until some one arrives who is able to check their heavy artillery the skidding process isn't likely to last.

For all that it is a great and pleasing sign to see the Naps and Phillies still swinging grimly on to second place. These two clubs hold all records in the way of frenzied dashes for the first six weeks, only to disintegrate and blow apart after June. Both have had their hard luck and have weathered the storm with enough courage left to continue the attack. This may not be sufficient to shoot either into first place this season, but it should be of vast value for other years ahead. It's hard to shatter a discouraging habit, but once shattered, there's always a fine chance of scrambling tradition to a finish and of keeping the new angle well in place.

Birmingham, for example, has a young club in the main and enough fine material for a star macine later on. There are but few veterans on his roster, and if he can dispel the old system which split apart each season after the first two months he has a great chance to push his people out in front within two years, and maybe one.

We are still pulling for Cleveland to win one flag before Lajoie is through. It's a crime against higher art for the game's greatest natural hitter to glide through a long career without even a shot to fire in the one big jubilee of the sport. When we have seen Lajoie batting and Johnson pitching in a world series, the rest of it can go by default. Cobb, Walsh, Speaker, Bender, Mathewson, Baker, Wagner, Evers, etc., have drawn their chance to figure, and these other two are overdue.

"If two star clubs were picked from the National and American league teams," queries an expert, "which would probably win the greatest number of games?"

We refuse to be drawn in the maelstrom of any such argument, but at the same time we don't mind confessing that we should hate to have a lot of money bet against a ball club that had Johnson pitching, with Cobb, Speaker and Jackson in the outfield. Even 20 to 1 wouldn't be enough.

The Phillies may not win the flag, but the report that they were to subside and settle well below both Pirates and Cubs appears to have been greatly exaggerated. They still insist upon making noises peculiar to ball clubs that are merely good enough to obtain sufficient runs to win.

Only Small Disadvantage GOLF Driving With the Brassie

When I see a golfer foozling his drives from tee after tee through failing to get the ball up and away cleanly so as to clear the rough grass or hazard, I often wonder why in the world he doesn't have sense enough to take out his brassie and perhaps get much better results.

As a matter of fact James Braid, many times British open champion and today one of the longest drivers in the world, frequently uses his brassie off the tee for weeks at a time.

To the man temporarily off his drive the added loft to the brassie face yields just the degree of rise to the ball that he requires to give it a chance to fly. It is a much more rational change than resorting to using iron clubs, which take so much more out of a man seeking to get a respectable distance.

A decided advantage gained by the use of the brassy from the tee is the practice of driving from a very low tee or none at all. The lower the tee the longer the ball in most cases. The reason that many golfers are short from the tee is that they try to hit the ball away from the top of a high mound of sand and hitting far under the back center of the ball, scoop it away for an arc-like flight instead of getting the go and penetration of the properly hit ball.

Nearly every golfer has noticed that he frequently gets a longer ball with a brassie through the green than on his tee shots. The reason is above stated.

At the present time I am doing all my driving with a brassie and getting a longer ball than ever before, both as to carry and roll. I am not using the barssie because I am off my drive, but a few weeks ago, in using the brassie to carry a sharp hill 100 yards ahead of a tee I got a ball that went away so beautifully and far that I stuck to the brassie from the next tee, and for some reason or other am confident that I get better balls from the tee than at any previous time.

Many years back when I first got a wooden club fairly working in my game, I remember that it was a brassie that first enabled me to get even a respectable ball from the tee with enough consistency to be called driving.

Don't be afraid to try your brassie once in a while from the tee. It may provide the tonic you need.

PELKY TO RE-ENTER RING; AFTER SOME OF THE STARS

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—If Arthur Pelky does not cut some figure in heavyweight affairs before he is sent back into obscurity it will not be the fault of Manager Tommy Burns. Burns is making strong calls upon his eloquence in an endeavor to prove that Pelky is not a mere accident. The one-time heavyweight champion declares that he is no longer able to cope with Pelky in training bouts on account of the latter having improved so much.

Reports from other sources say that Pelky really has learned something under the coaching of his manager. In his own behalf Pelky declares that until he joined forces with Burns he never had a chance to study the fine points of the game.

"I'll admit I was very green when I was in the east, but I'll surprise the wise ones when I start again," he says. "I was never properly trained, as I never had a cent before and did not take boxing seriously."

It is said that Burns had coached Pelky in the use of a short arm jolt that carries knockout force and is most difficult to avoid. He also uses a straight left that has speed and is accurately delivered.

Pelky states that he is most anxious for a battle with Gunboat Smith to prove that he really belongs at the top of the white hope division. He will probably be matched with Charley Miller for a short bout at Frisco in the near future and if his showing warrants it, he will be given a chance with the lanky Gunboat.

Union Point Wins; Disputes Madison's Claim

UNION POINT, Ga., Aug. 7.—In the prettiest game ever played here and witnessed by one of the largest crowds of the season, Siloam went down in defeat before Union Point by the score of 3 to 1. Chug Coombs for the home team pitched wonderful ball, and seems to be about the best twirler ever performed here. He fannd fifteen men and gave up only four scratch hits. Estes Durham's work behind the plate was great. The other features of the game were the infield work of "Sid" and Ralph Newsome and John Durham. Campbell hitting also featured.

Robinson, for Siloam, pitched a nice game, his support at times was unsteady.

Union Point wish to say right here that Madison's claims for championship are wrong and that they will have to show Union Point before she makes any such claims.

The line-up and score by innings, was as follows:

Score by innings. R. H. E.
Union Point ..... .000 020 100— 3 6 2
Siloam ..... 000 000 100— 1 4 6

Incidentally President Boykin says he will suspend a whole club, if necessary, to uphold an umpire. All three of the men suspended were liked here and an effort will be made to get them reinstated, as they have good reputations and acted Monday from a fit of passion.

Brickley Will Get a Chance

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7.—Connie Mack, the astute manager of the Athletics, has not seen George Brickley, the Everett, Mass., High school ball player, work, but he said today that he is satisfied with the youngster, and thinks he has made a find. Connie was asked whether he had seen Brickley in yesterday morning's practice, and said:

"No, I did not see him work out yesterday, but I talked with some of the players, and they say that he looks like the real goods. One thing sure, he can do the most important thing called for in the outfield, and that is, hit the ball.

"Of course, I know that he will not do at present, and it may take one or even two years to develop him to our standard, but he is well worth taking a chance with, and he will get a fair trial.

"At present Brickley is here for me to look him over, and it is doubtful whether he will get in a game for a long time, but one can never tell what will happen."

Mack was asked whether he intended to send Brickley to the minors for seasoning and how long he would let him remain away.

"I don't know that I shall send him to any minor league at all. I may keep him with the club the same as I did Eddie Collins, and let him get his experience with us.

"That is the best way to develop some youngsters, and I have found the way very successful to date. He will have the benefit of seeing the other players in real contests, and we can all take a hand in showin ghim the fine points of the game."

East Griffin Wins Two Good Series

GRIFFIN, Ga., Aug. 7.—The fast team of East Griffin played three games with the club of Jackson, Ga, losing the first to Jackson by the score of 10 to 4. The feature of the game was the pitching of Bowden for Jackson.

The second game went to Griffin by the score of 7 to 1. The feature of the game was the pitching of Bunn, of Griffin, fanning eleven men and allowing but one hit.

East Griffin took the third and last by the score of 7 to 0. The feature of the game was the pitching of Sauls for East Griffin and the fast fielding of the team.

The East Griffin team didn't show "Chug" Coombs, the ex-Southern league hurler, any mercy, rapping out ten hits. The fast Jackson team was not able to cross home plate.

The East Griffin team also defeated Pepperton, Ga., by the score of 8 to 7.

No Sunday Work For This Hurler

Harry Clayton Harper, southpaw twirler from Hackensack, N. J., does not play ball on Sunday. Therefore, he sat in the press box and witnessed the great victory of Dixie Joe Boehling rejoicing in the success of his roomie. While sitting there he explained his reason for not playing ball on Sunday, and it is a perfectly good reason, too. It also indicates what kind of lads get into our national pastime.

"You know I'm only a kid to my mother," said Harper to the writer. "When I came away to join the Washington club I had to explain to my mother that ballplayers were quite like other people, not like actors are supposed to be. She thinks, you know, that ball players are more or less tough. I know they are not, but she doesn't know it. She didn't want me to play ball at all at first, but I finally got her consent.

"But you must promise me, Harry," she said, 'that you will not play ball on Sunday. I don't want you to play ball at all, if you have to play it on Sunday. That's not the day for baseball; there are better things to be done on that day than playing ball.

"Well, you know, this may be a foolish idea and all that, but it is my mother, and as she is all I have left in the world, I mean to stick by my promise. I thought Manager Griffith would laugh at me when I put it up to him, but he didn't. He took it seriously, telling me to loaf every Sunday. Perhaps next year I may get my mother's consent to play on Sunday, but now I have promised her for this season, and I'm going through with it."—Exchange.

Sullivan Gets Busy On Olympic Rules

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—James E. Sullivan, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, sailed on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie for Bremen. With Justice Weeks, of the New York supreme court, and Colonel Robert M Thompson, Mr. Sullivan is a delegate to an international conference in Berlin on August 20 and 21 to draft rules for the Olympic games in 1916.

While abroad, Mr. Sullivan said, he would arrange the international events for the Panama exposition, and that despite reports that some of the powers would not exhibit at the fair, he expected to have the co-operation of all the great nations.

East Griffin finding Bowdens' drops for twelve hits Harrison started the batting with a double. Sauls followed with a triple and Woodruff followed with another double, hitting Bowden sharply.

Good Hitter Near Bottom

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Although Fred Snodgrass, of the Giants, is now way over .300 and hitting furiously, John McGraw keeps him batting eighth and says he will hold him there. "It has just occurred to me," says John J., "that this odd idea of putting the two weakest hitters of the team eighth and ninth, where they can spoil a rally, is fossilized foolishness. If the eighth man is a slugger, he will come to the rescue time and again, and what's more, will do away with the problem that confronts a manager when it's a close pinch, the pitcher up and one down, in that situation you usually yank the pitcher and send up a reserve batter. If he falls down you've accomplished nothing and lost a pitcher who, perhaps, was going very fairly, while his successor may get the life beaten out of him.

"With your eighth batter a .300 point man you have a good show to get him on, none out, and your pitcher up; then you can take a chance on keeping the pitcher in, as he may at least deliver a sacrifice or advance the runner on his out. Since Snodgrass has been burning the leather I only have to take out pitchers when their slab work is poor, not to use sub hitters."

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

A Visit To Tuskegee Normal And Industrial Institute

THERE are but few people in the south who realize the size or extent of the school and farming operations now indulged in at Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, managed and operated by Booker T. Washington. I had an occasion to thoroughly inspect this four-teen hundred-acre farm with its varied industries, and while I have visited this place a number of times I had no idea that it was possible for such a big change to have been brought about in a few years on the lands such as they were that this work had to be done on. These poor, barren sandy lands of Alabama have been converted into the richest and most fruitful fertile fields that are now growing enormous crops. Some one thousand acres are under cultivation, all under fence and divided up into differ-ent fields, and each field watered by an artificial water system that has been thoroughly perfected on this immense plantation. Some ten thousand bushels of oats have just been thrashed and they have fully five hundred acres of peas now growing luxuriously on this oat stubble.

Not less than one thousand head of live stock can now be seen on this farm. There are more than one hundred mules that have been raised at this institution that would do credit to any west-ern farm. It is surprising and gratifying to see such a splendid lot of horses and mules and to know that they can be so success-fully raised in the south. One lot of thirty-seven two-year-old mule and horse colts in one pasture were especially attractive and show what can be raised on the lands of our south. Some three hundred head of the finest Jerseys and shorthorn cattle were also seen, most of them having been raised on these premises, and the secret of it all is plenty feed with the proper attention. There is also a herd of some five hundred head of hogs. The records in Alabama show that pork is being produced at less than 2 cents per pound, and with a system that these people use in saving their pork and beef by a pickling process similar to that used by Armour and all the other large packing concerns it enables anyone to kill and save this immense amount of food whenever it is ready instead of having to wait for a cold spell to do so.

It would be impossible for this institution to feed the more than three thousand students, teachers and their families if they did not raise a large portion of these food products in their immediate com-munity. Some two hundred acres of sweet potatoes can be seen grow-ing on land that a crop of oats has been harvested from, showing the possibilities of our getting two heavy crops each season off of the same land, which is something that but few countries can do. Every-thing connected with this institution shows prosperity and thrift and also shows what can be accomplished with sufficient money and plenty of labor. One great advantage it has over many others is that a large amount of labor can always be had for the work that has to be done on such a large institution. However, in order for the work that has been done all the pupils receive an education, their board and clothing for a large part of this work. Any pupil without the money can go to this institution and for a few months' work have credited to his ac-count practically enough to carry them through the school for nine months, and through this method a large number of the pupils, at least one-third of them, work their way through school. The enroll-ment up to the present time for the coming season is more than six-teen hundred pupils already.

Nearly every line of education is taught at this school, including agriculture and all of its different branches, live stock raising, dairy-ing, and also poultry culture, there being operated in connection with this school one of the largest poultry plants in the south where poultry culture is taught as a regular study to many of the pupils. It requires an immense amount of food products, milk, butter, eggs, fowls, beef and pork to feed and supply this large number of people, and be it said to their credit a large per cent of these products are now being produced right on this farm, and in addition to what they consume themselves great quantities are sold to outside markets. Especially is this true of the dairy department, and I was informed that more than thirty head of mules and horses had been sold during the past year over and above what was required to keep for their own use. Some two hundred head of mules and horses are required to do the work on this immense place and at least one hundred milch cows are con-stantly used in the dairy operations. I am informed that are being constantly used in the dairy operations. I am informed that are raised on this farm that the south can raise for one-third the cost that they are now buying the south can raise for one-third the cost that they are now buying average horses and mules at that are needed to do the work in this country, and as good as can be raised anywhere in the world, but plenty feed must be had first to keep them growing and this is one of the things that these people have an abundance of.

This is a trip worth taking and a sight that hundreds of our southern farmers should see by visiting this great institution, and while there is not much said of this working in the south he is doing a work of untold value to this race.

Yours very truly.

WEST END.

NEAR GORDON STREET, right on the car line, we have to offer one of the prettiest ten-room houses in Atlanta, thoroughly modern and right up to date. I know of no home that could carry more comforts or in its plan and location be more desirable, built and occupied by its owner, with a family consisting of four and a half acre. We can rent this furnished or unfurnished, possession any time, and to the right parties a rental that will seem remarkably low. See us at once about this.

ANSLEY PARK, INMAN PARK AND WEST END.

IN ANSLEY PARK, Inman Park, and West End, all of these are prettiest residence sections, we have some of the most attractive homes and bungalows that we have ever been able to offer, and nearly all of these are thoroughly modern, and up-to-date. It is needless to comment on the neighborhood, all having fine car service, very convenient and surrounded by the best schools and churches. Homes of this type seldom occupy spaces in a renting list. They are generally owned and occupied by their owners. So this is your chance to get an exceptional home at a very reasonable rent on account of the odd season.

Several close-in store leases were featured in real estate announcements Thursday.

Forresth & George Adair made the leases, and they cover various locations on main streets.

They leased for Edwin R. and Leonard Haas, to the Southern Barbers' college quarters at No. 151 Decatur street. The term of the lease is for five years.

They also leased for Forrest & George Adair to J. N. McIntyre No. 15 and 17 West Alabama street for a term of five years. The lessees will open an up-to-date market.

Prospects are bright for Atlanta winning the 1916 convention of the National Association of Real Estate exchanges, according to S. B. Turman, one of the delegates who has just returned from the Winnipeg convention.

Mr. Turman says that the convention was very much impressed with the invitation which was presented by Harris G. White, president of the local board.

The 1914 convention will go to Pittsburg, the next one to Los Angeles, and the next, probably, to Atlanta. The convention, Mr. Turman says, would bring 1,500 delegates here.

he gathering at Winnipeg was a representative one of the real estate business the country over, as practically every important city of the United States was presented.

TROOPS AND TRIBESMEN FIGHT IN CITY STREETS

(By Associated Press.)

TEHERAN, Aug. 7.—Two score or more of men were killed or wounded in street fighting between Persian troops and Bakhtiari tribesmen today. Then peace was restored and the tribesmen submitted.

The Bakhtiaris are a nomadic, semi-independent people, who inhabit western Persian near the Turkish frontier. They are allied to the Kurds.

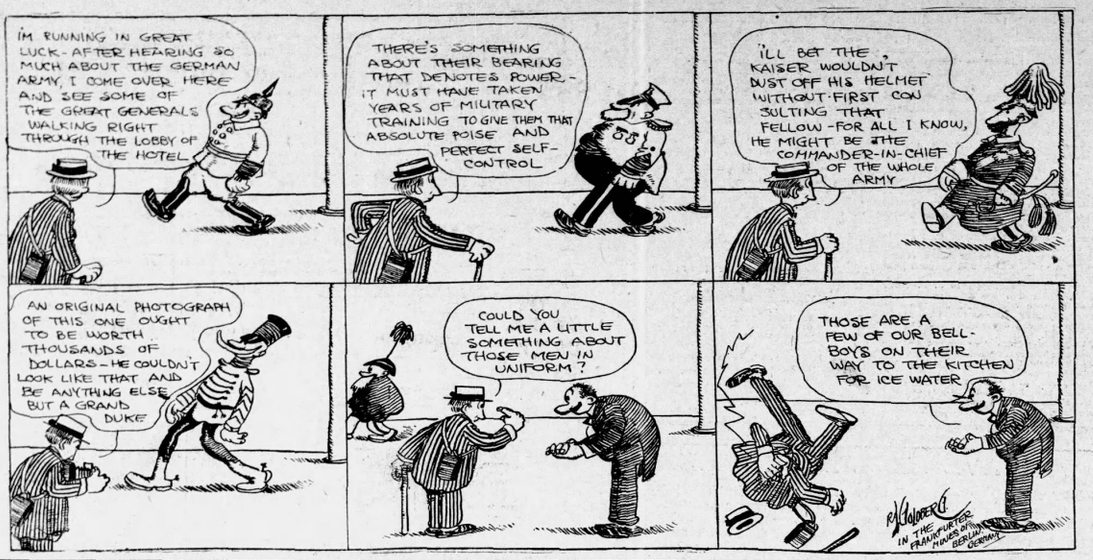
UNIFORMS MUST BE VERY CHEAP IN GERMANY.

Copyright, 1913, by R. L. Goldberg.



I'M RUNNING IN GREAT LUCK - AFTER HEARING SO MUCH ABOUT THE GERMAN ARMY, I COME OVER HERE AND SEE SOME OF THE GREAT GENERALS WALKING RIGHT THROUGH THE LOBBY OF THE HOTEL
THERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT THEIR BEARING THAT DENOTES POWER - IT MUST HAVE TAKEN YEARS OF MILITARY TRAINING TO GIVE THEM THAT ABSOLUTE POISE AND PERFECT SELF-CONTROL
I'LL BET THE KAISER WOULDN'T DUST OFF HIS HELMET WITHOUT FIRST CONSULTING THAT FELLOW - FOR ALL I KNOW, HE MIGHT BE THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE WHOLE ARMY
AN ORIGINAL PHOTOGRAPH OF THIS ONE OUGHT TO BE WORTH THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS - HE COULDN'T LOOK LIKE THAT AND BE ANYTHING ELSE BUT A GRAND DUKE COULD YOU TELL ME A LITTLE SOMETHING ABOUT THOSE MEN IN UNIFORM?

JUSTICE COURTS TO BE ABOLISHED IN FULTON

Senate Passes Bill Unanimously—Two Revenue Bills Are Also Passed

The bill of Representatives Blackburn and Smith, of Fulton county, abolishing the justice of the peace courts in Atlanta and Fulton county and providing municipal judges in their stead was passed by unanimous vote of the state senate Thursday morning.

The bill has already passed the house, and now needs only the governor's signature to become a law, taking effect next year. It is backed by the Atlanta Bar association, and simply does away with justice of the peace courts in favor of courts provided over by municipal judges.

The senate also passed the house bill of Aikens, of Glynn, Thursday morning which increases the tax on bottlers of soft drinks and all kinds of beverages. According to the provisions of the bill, a machine carrying one filling head is taxed $25 a year; a machine carrying two filling heads, $75 a year; a machine carrying three filling heads, $150 a year.

Just before adourning Thursday morning, the senate took up the bill of Senators Huie and Anderson increasing the number of senatorial districts in the state from 64 to 60, which gives the six largest counties in the state in point of population, of which Fulton county is one, each a senator to itself. There is some opposition to the bill, and the discussion will be continued Thursday afternoon.

The senate passed two tax bills which increase revenue, but has not yet taken up the main tax bill. Its measures adopted were two house bills, one of Aikens, of Glynn, and one of Slater, of Bryan. They raise the occupation tax on both state and foreign corporations, and will result in a considerable increase of revenue to the state.

ATLANTA TYPOS INVITE WORLD UNION TO CITY

Trouble of Meeting Place at Nashville Causes Wardlaw to Act

Acting in behalf of the local typographical union, William S. Wardlaw, one of its best known members, Wednesday extended an invitation to the International Typographical union to meet in Atlanta, when he was informed that Nashville, Tenn., is experiencing trouble in finding a satisfactory meeting place.

The convention is scheduled to meet Monday in Nashville at the state capitol in the house of representatives hall, but an extra session of the Tennessee legislature has been called for that date and for this reason the hall will not be available for the typo convention. However, it is thought Wardlaw's invitation will not be accepted as there are several other large halls in Nashville.

"Billy" Wardlaw, as he is familiarly known among his many friends, is one of the two delegates from the Atlanta local to the international convention.

LIFE'S STRUGGLE WITH ILLNESS

Mrs. Stewart Tells How She Suffered from 16 to 45 years old—How Finally Cured.

Euphemia, Ohio.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when verging into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 16 years old.

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicines was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 18 years.

"The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I cannot tell you or any one the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blest with excellent health for a woman of my age and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it.

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse and being wholly self-supporting I cannot over estimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing since I was 52 years old. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss EVELYN ADELIA STEWART, Euphemia, Ohio.
